Tax Free Rum
Why Men Like Sail Boats

From a Bermuda steamer on Friday morning young gentlemen, nicely sunburned, came ashore, dragging heavy boxes and valises filled with bottles. Dock employes complain of the heavy "luggage" that passengers now bring from Bermuda, and many foreign ports.

Boxes landed on the dock were marked plainly "gin," "whiskey," "rum" and the "goods" passed through the customs house free of duty, although Americans that manufacture such products here are taxed "above their eyebrows."

Any traveller may bring in one hundred dollars' worth of any kind of alcoholic liquor, without duty. And this does not mean two or three bottles. In Jamaica you may buy strong rum for $5 a dozen, and the traveler may bring back twenty cases of strong rum, 240 bottles, and pay no duty.

At Buffalo, N. Y., and other points near Canada's border, automobiles go back and forth bringing in whiskey duty free, cheating this government and American manufacturers. Somebody in Washington should have brains enough to stop that.

The 53-foot yawl, Stormy Weather, belonging to Philip Leboutillier, with a crew of young Vikings on board, yesterday landed at Bergen, Norway, winning the transatlantic race from Newport, Rhode Island.

When the news of this victory arrived, Mr. Leboutillier, usually a very solemn business man, seemed as pleased as though someone had given him a key to the cave of Aladdin. Mr. Leboutillier's son, Philip, Jr., sailed on his father's boat in the world's longest, hardest

T. O. M. Sopworth's unsuccessful America's cup challenger, Endeavour, led early but struck a calm and the American boat forged ahead to the finish.

BAER IS WED TO COFFEE SHOP GIRL

By Associated Press

Washington, June 29—Max Baer, pugilism's playful former heavyweight champion, and Mary Ellen Sullivan, manager of the Willard Hotel coffee shop, were married today.

The marriage was performed by Justice F. Dickinson Letts of the District of Columbia Supreme Court in his home.

In obtaining the marriage license, the bride gave her age as 32 and Baer as 26.

She is from Ithaca, N. Y. The attendants were Mrs. Claire Wagner of Washington, and Jay O'Brien of New York.

The couple planned to leave by plane later this afternoon for New York City.

BOTH ALL IN WHITE

The bride was dressed in white with a blue vest and a large-brimmed hat of dark blue. She bore a corsage of orchids and lilies.

Max appeared in white with blue necktie.

Only the participants and the attendants were present.

MUCH SECRECY

Fellow hotel employes described the bride as very capable and "a girl who keeps he affairs to herself."

This morning when she went to work she cleaned up her desk and handed in her resignation. She bade her fellow workers goodbye and walked out.

The hotel management was considerably put out because of Miss Sullivan's precipitate leave-taking from her manager-hostess "job." They complained she resigned without previous notice.

She returned to the hotel only long enough to pack her belongings before leaving again for the wedding ceremony, refusing to talk to reporters and to pose for photographers.

"It will take three months to train another girl for that job," one official said. "I wish people wouldn't run off and get married this way."

ON WAY TO WED

Up to within a few moments of her departure here for the license bureau, Miss Sullivan was going over menu cards and other details of her job with the hotel manager.

A few moments later, she dis-

Braves Field, June 29—The Phillies made it three in a row over the Braves behind seven hits pitching by Curt Davis in the fourth game of the present series this afternoon.

The Braves got away to a one-run lead in the opening inning but it was short-lived as the visitors came up with three runs in the second on a single and two doubles.

FUGITIVE, 3 GIRLS SEIZED IN DICKINSON KILLING

SUSPECTS HELD IN INDIANA FOR CRIME

Fort Wayne, Ind., June 29—William Lee Ferris, with several aliases, and three women companions were arrested in the slaying of Howard Carter Dickinson in Detroit, it was announced here today.

Those seized on a downtown street and taken to police headquarters were Ferris, 36; Flossie Jackson, 24, Lorette Jackson, 27, and Jean Miller, 24.

They declined to make a statement, police said. Detroit officers were reported on the way here to question them.

Detroit, June 29—An attempt to mix pleasure and hotel "party-girls" with the $40,000,000 business that brought him to this city, cost Howard Carter Dickinson, nephew of Chief Justice Hughes of the Supreme Court, his life.

That was the police version of the fate that led up to the discovery of the 52-year-old lawyer, robbed and shot to death Thursday.

Fred W. Frahm, chief of Detroit detectives, named William Lee Ferris, 33, a police character and "hookie" for "party-girls", as the wanted man. Two girls are also sought.

One girl is red-headed and freckled and attired in a linen suit.

The second girl is believed to be the one who, after the murder, checked the brief case of the slain attorney at the Book Cadillac Hotel with its contents involving the claims of a client on the $40,000,000 estate of the late William H. Yawkey of New York.

Ferris, 26, is known to police under several aliases. He was injected into the case by Andrew J. Smygen, a taxi driver, who said Ferris told him he might need a cab for a meeting with a "New York lawyer named Dickinson, who had a lot of money."

TRAIL 24 HOURS OLD

The Ferris trail was 24 hours old before detectives picked it up. Although an avalanche of tips and clues poured into detective headquarters all night, Chief of Detectives Fred W. Frahm reported that Ferris apparently had dropped completely out of sight.

Also missing from their usual haunts, police said, were the two girl acquaintances of Ferris, known as "Bobbie" and "Florence."

Their angle in the Dickinson case was not made clear by officers, but Chief Frahm said "we believe that in addition to Ferris, at least a couple of women know a great deal about this."

Frahm and his corps of detectives maintained a tight lipped silence on theories to account for the strange circumstances of the death of Dickinson.

Detective Frahm said he is almost certain also that the legal business which brought Dickinson here had nothing to do with his death.

While gathering information and affidavits to press Mrs. Elizabeth Carmichael Witherspoon's claim to the Yawkey millions, Dickinson, police say, met Ferris, the small-time stager of hotel room parties for traveling men—for a fee.

Ferris fled Detroit, checking out a few hours after Dickinson's body was found. Ferris drove a 1929 sedan, Michigan license plate No. X-25397.

The tires have white walls. A general alarm has been issued to state police throughout Michigan and eastward to pick up and hold Ferris.

Record of several telephone calls made from Dickinson's room at the Book-Cadillac Hotel to Ferris at the Detroiter Hotel were discovered by the police.

Then came the story of Andrew Smygen, the taxicab driver who had been approached by Ferris and informed:

"I've got a date with two girls for Wednesday night with a lawyer at the Book-Cadillac. That guy has plenty of money."

"Ferris told me," said Smygen, "about two girls at the Detroiter.

"He said they had been out the night before, but were going out again with a rich lawyer.

"He arranged that I should be at the Detroiter with my cab at 9:30 p. m. (Wednesday). But at 9 o'clock Ferris came out of the hotel and said that plans had been changed."

In addition to Ferris and the two girls, police are seeking two men as material witnesses. They were seen with Dickinson.

Mother and Wife Stick to Ferris, Hunted Fugitive

By Associated Press.

Detroit, Mich., June 29—The wife and mother of William Lee Ferris, sought for questioning as one of the last persons to have seen Howard Carter Dickinson before the New York attorney was slain early yesterday, voiced their confidence today that Ferris is innocent of any wrong-doing and will voluntarily appear before police soon.

"He will come back when he sees how foolish it has been to run away," said Ferris' mother, Mrs. Emma Schweitzer.

"We'll help him with what we can scrape together, but I don't know how I could reach him to tell him to go to the police!"

Commenting on the trial and acquittal of her son on a charge of slaying Albert Burke, she said:

"He followed that man and shot him—there was nothing wrong there. That man had stolen his last penny after breaking into his house.

"And when they arrested him for carrying guns—what would you do? Others have sworn they will kill him just the way he killed that man."

Los Angeles, June 29—Hearst newspapers are publishing the truth about Russia and William Randolph Hearst is to be commended for a patriotic service of highest worth, Lieutenant Alexander B. Swensonvarig declared in a talk before the California Society of the Sons of the Revolution.

The lieutenant, a radical officer in the Russian army until the overthrow of the Kerensky government by the Bolsheviki, and now a naturalized American, said:

"Activities of the American Legion and other organizations in combatting subversive efforts of Reds in this country are to be commended by patriotic citizens.

"I am sometimes asked whether the letters and descriptions of conditions in Russia that are being published in the Hearst papers are just propaganda. I can answer that they are the truth, and Mr. Hearst is to be commended for presenting the truth to the American people."

Stage Beauty Asks $250,000

Chicago, June 29—Pretty Dorothy Appleby of Portland, Me., stage and movie actress, today filed suit for $250,000 "heart balm" against Sidney M. Spiegel, Jr., heir to a furniture fortune. Just before the Illinois court doors closed on that kind of action.

The actress charges Spiegel won her in a three weeks' courtship in Hollywood last spring, brought her to Chicago and told her they would be married on the "Ile De France."

Spiegel procured a passport for her, the auburn haired actress claimed, and then announced the marriage plans were all off.

Dorothy and Morgan H. Galloway, an actor, were divorced three years ago.

Spiegel, whose father is a retired furniture manufacturer, is the former husband of Fay Lanphier, who was named as "Miss America" of 1927 in a beauty contest. They were divorced in March, 1929, in Reno, Nev.

Rome, June 29 (AP) — Nine deaths from sunstroke during the preceding 24 hours were reported today from the presumably cooler northern regions of Italy, with the temperature at 98 degrees.

Nursing Babies in Congress Gallery O. K., Women Say

Washington, June 29—Nursing a baby, after all, is a perfectly normal human function, not exactly new, and women members of Congress said plenty about House gallery "blue-noses" who don't like it.

They said whoever objected and caused the eviction of Mrs. Everett Parker, Tennessee mountaineer woman who was feeding her 8-month-old baby in the ancient manner, should have looked the other way—or left the House chamber.

Whoever the objector, they agreed, he wasn't so squeamish about things in the first year of his own life.

Meanwhile, somewhat dismayed and deeply embarrassed by the disturbance she caused, Mrs. Parker and her husband, together with their three children, were ensconced in a single room here, while relief agencies were providing food. As the husband is unable to work, and his war pension has been cut off, they were causing real headscratching by relief officials.

But hear what the ladies of Congress had to say. Mrs. Hattie Caraway, Democratic Senator from Arkansas, and mother of two sons, declared:

"I see no harm in a mother nursing her child. She didn't know she was breaking any rule of the House. (As a matter of fact, a perusal of the rules showed she wasn't.)

"A great many people feel it's unseemly for a mother to nurse her child in public, but I certainly don't. It wasn't unseemly in the old days, and I hope it isn't today."

Mrs. Virginia Jenckes, Democratic representative from Indiana, and mother of a 20-year-old daughter, said:

"This woman hitch-hiked, with her family, all the way from Tennessee to lay her problem before her government. That, with four small children, took real courage, and true faith.

"If the rest of us had as much faith and as much courage, if indeed the rest of us had the sincerity to nurse our babies and nurse them in public if necessary, the babies would be better, we'd be better, and heaven knows the country would be better."

There was only one dissenting voice, but that voice was emphatic. Mrs. Florence Kahn (R.), of San Francisco, said:

"Yes, I'll comment; print this: When we've all got as much as we have on our minds, I don't see why the newspapers waste space on printing such tommy-rot and drivel."

Who's Guzzle King? 100 in Beer Olympic

By Associated Press

Milwaukee, June 29—Here in a city where veal cutlets are wiener schnitzel, and meatballs are koenigsberger klops, 100 hitherto unknowns today stood on the threshold of fame as beer guzzlers.

For half gallon cans of the foaming brew to decide which shall become eligible to vie for immortality as the city's first beer drinking champion in terms of speed.

When the Fond Du Lac Advancement Association, seeking something new in the line of advancement, decided on the contest, its designers envisioned a battle royal, with eight or ten persons gulping their teeth against the metallic edge of a pail.

A heavy flow of entries gave the Gambrinian festival more of an Olympic aspect, and the promoters decided to run the meet in heats, despite a protest received by George Wolter, Jr., association secretary, from the W. C. T. U.

From the 100 big, little, fat, thin, young and old men and women, 16 qualifiers will be selected tonight.

The 16 tomorrow afternoon will meet at a suburban picnic park, there to hew to the brew, letting the suds fall where they may.

N. H. MAYOR Guarded in Strike

Rochester, N. H., June 29—The home of Mayor Sumner W. Watson was guarded today by police after textile strikers protested against the appointment of 29 special police officers.

An old list of special police was ruled ineffective by the mayor. Many of the names on the new list were greeted by the strikers with hisses.

Ship Sails, He Doesn't

By Associated Press

Ipswich, June 29—Argirios Glonakoutzos returned to Ipswich today, wrapped in disappointment.

Yesterday 50 countrymen gathered in Boston from far-flung sections of New England to bid him bon voyage to the homeland—Greece. His baggage, and many handsome gifts, were put aboard the steamer Lord Byron, while his friends wined and dined him.

Several friends were occupied tracing Glonakoutzos' re-entry papers, which had been mailed to his Ipswich address. Finally the papers were located and a taxi was hired to take the document to Boston.

The taxi reached the pier 20 minutes after th esteamer sail, without Glonakoutzos, but with his baggage.

MAN FORGETS He Owns an Auto

New York, June 29 (AP)—A Hudson river ferry pulled in here yesterday having on board an automobile without a driver.

A checkup showed the car belonged to Nerton Shipman of North Bergen, N. J. Police investigated on the theory he had met with an accident.

They found him at his North Bergen dyeing plant. He explained he left the ferry in New York, transacted business and returned home, completely forgetting his car.

HEALEY GETS 5 Years in Killing

Los Angeles, June 29—John E. Healey, 29, former actor, from Framingham, Mass., was sentenced to serve five years to life in prison for slaying Danski Kubo, Japanese grocer, in an argument over a bunch of carrots.

He was captured after writing a note to police exonerating two suspects in custody. In the note he offered to "shoot another Japanese" to prove the innocence of one of the suspects.

HUDDLESTON IN NEW ATTACK ON ROOSEVELT UTILITY BILL

By International News Service

Washington, June 29—Renewing his offensive against the holding company death sentence, Representative Huddleston, (D.), Alabama, today charged this drastic provision presented the "extreme new radicalism of a Mussolini, Hitler and Stalin."

Huddleston engaged in a bitter verbal duel with Representative Sauthoff (P.) of Wisconsin, and Representative Hill (D.) of Washington, who attacked his steadfast opposition to President Roosevelt's demand for dissolution of large holding company structures.

Sauthoff characterized the modified utility bill as "the brat of the power trust" and flayed Huddleston's criticism of President Roosevelt.

"You have no right to attribute propaganda motives to the Chief Executive," Sauthoff declared. "You may castigate the President, but the House Progressives will stand shoulder to shoulder with Mr. Roosevelt.

"To the triumvirate of Herbert Hoover, Ogden Mills and Henry I. Harriman of the United States Chamber of Commerce, we now can add George Huddleston of Alabama."

Continuing the assault on Huddleston, Hill charged he "has sold his birthright for a mess of pottage."

Huddleston angrily rose in his seat and demanded the remark be stricken from the record. After a heated colloquoy Hill withdrew the statement.

Huddleston thereupon reiterated his statements of yesterday in which he accused President Roosevelt of violating the 1932 Democratic platform in demanding dissolution of holding companies instead of drafting federal regulation.

Huddleston brought Democrats and Republicans to their feet cheering, in a scene seldom duplicated in the House, with a denunciation of the administration's effort to "smash helpless investors" by destroying utility holding companies.

HE CHARGED THE ADMINISTRATION WITH SEEKING TO "WREAK VENGEANCE" ON THE UTILITIES INSTEAD OF INTELLIGENTLY SEEKING TO REGULATE THEM.

After finishing pronouncing he would defend the House bill, from which the "death sentence" had been stricken, he added:

"Whether it be influence brought to bear by officials of the utilities or by their security holders, or whether it be the threat of the demagogues and the agitators on the other hand, or whether it be to oppose the chief of this nation, I will go ahead fearlessly right and all hell cannot stop me from it."

Urges Democrats to Follow Platform

Urging his Democratic colleagues to follow their 1932 platform, he said:

"What is the issue on this bill? In a few words, the issue is whether you will regulate or whether you will destroy. My position now is and has been from the very inception of this legislation that the utility holding companies should be regulated—sharply and rigidly regulated.

"I have some authority for that position. I turn to the Democratic platform of 1932:

"WE ADVOCATE REGULATION BY THE FULL EXTENT, OF FEDERAL POWER OF HOLDING COMPANIES WHICH SELL SECURITIES IN INTERSTATE COMMERCE."

"Upon that plank I stand. Heretofore, I have regularly, to destroy those who advocate destruction cannot quarrel with me for my Democracy. No Democrat can find fault with me for standing upon the Democratic platform of 1932.

"Socialists, radicals, what nots of whatever stripe, they have a right to quarrel.

Huddleston's bristling speech gave powerful support to opponents of Wm. Dealers' efforts to destroy holding companies.

Ranking Democrat on the interstate commerce committee in charge of the bill, Huddleston marshaling arguments to show destruction of the companies would be "deflationary to business, and retrogressive."

Loud laughter greeted his sarcastic charge that:

"Two bright young men, Ben Cohen and Thomas Corcoran were brought down here from New York to teach Congress how to shoot."

He said he would vote for the House bill, as it brought regulation rather than death to holding groups. Final House vote is expected next week.

Then slashing at the Senate bill for outright ruin of holding companies, he said it was "the finest demagogic bait that was ever spread." The government has built up a strong sentiment against utilities, he said, explaining:

"They whipped the country into a rage. They formed public opinion, especially among those who had the least information. They caused this public opinion to reach a fever heat.

"DEMAGOGUES SAW THEIR OPPORTUNITY AND AGITATORS SAW THE TIME WAS RIPE FOR THEM.

"So, like eagles riding the storm, they mounted upon this wave of ill will and public opinion against the utilities. They are riding it right down to this time.

"This was the finest bait that was ever spread, because they not only get a chance to soak the rich and fan the prejudices of the poor against those who happen to have held onto a stray nickel, but they draw around themselves the cloak of patriotism—'I am the defender of the people.'"

Charges Attitude of Vengeance

Charging the administration with a vengeful attitude, he said:

"The issue is: Will you regulate or will you destroy? Will you correct the evils of the holding companies or will you wreak your vengeance upon them? Do you come to preserve, to build up, to correct, to make perfect that which is imperfect, or do you come in a punitive spirit, intending to punish the misdeeds of the past?

"You would wreak your vengeance, you say, by destroying them. Wreak your vengeance upon whom? On the corporations whom the chairman (Representative Rayburn, D-Tex.) has said are inanimate creatures without souls?

"Would you wreak your vengeance upon their officials who were guilty of the misdeeds and wrongs of which you complain?

"In very few instances do those individuals who took part in the wild speculation and high finance of the period ending in 1929 remain in charge of the companies that they had charge of at that time."

Calling on the House "not to fool ourselves," Huddleston went on:

"The only crime of investors is that they were too trustful. Their only crime is that they have already been punished, and lost most of what they had. For what they paid $100, the average price is now somewhere between $20 and $30.

"NOW THEY LOOK AND SEE THEIR GREAT GOVERNMENT, LED BY THE GENTLEMAN FROM TEXAS, MR. RAYBURN, TRYING TO TAKE AWAY FROM THEM THE LAST FEW REMAINING PENNIES. VENGEANCE UPON THEM? ALL RIGHT.

"I care nothing for them, whether they be widows, orphans, bankers or millionaires or whatever they are. They have no right to stand in the way and thwart the progress and general welfare.

"So that we may dismiss them out of the picture and say we do not care what becomes of the utilities or what becomes of the investors, but I ask you whether, in your desire to seek vengeance, you are willing to reach over the heads of those who have invested and to strike the welfare of your country full in the face.

"This measure is highly deflationary. It is now having a bad effect upon business.

"IT STRIKES A BLOW AT CONFIDENCE.

"It retards recovery. In no sense of the word can it be called a recovery measure. There is nothing about it to put a single man or woman to work. On the contrary, it discourages enterprise. It prevents development.

"It goes on toward the time when there will be a collapse in the electrical industry. And many, many men now at work will find they have lost their jobs. It strikes a blow at heavy industry in this country. It may delay and may retard recovery for an indefinite time."

Huddleston pointed out the House bill gives vast powers to the securities commission, but noted these are subject to review by the courts. The original bill would put companies at the mercy of the commission, he said.

He "deplored" outside influences, saying:

"There is the TVA with its program of propaganda—to inject into the school of literature and sold to the people through their publicity agents, with a staff in charge, set up in my own city with the whole mission of addressing women's clubs and labor organizations and this that and the other thing.

"At the expense of the taxpayers of the United States they are converting the people to the idea. More power and more influence to them.

"They should be clothed with the power not only to save men's bodies but to save their souls."

yacht race, 3050 miles over the North Atlantic.

Whoever is surprised at the intense interest in these sailing races forgets the early history of mankind. Lives of individuals and tribes often depended on the speed of early boats and canoes. The man who first raised a sail, made of an animal's skin, above a log, sharpened at both end, and distanced his enemy, was the founder of all modern navies.

Men, in their leisure, have an intense desire to do what all men did when the race was young, hunting, killing, fishing, racing, sailing.

New York state on Thursday put a woman, Eva Coo, into the electric chair and killed her, because she had killed somebody else.

"You killed, so we kill," said the proud state, just what any savage would have said 100,000 years ago.

There was a touching scene in the death room when Mrs. Coo, in the chair, was to have one electrode put on the back of her head where the hair had been shaved, and another electrode applied, wet to the calf of her leg. To apply the leg electrode it was necessary to lift up her skirt, and gentlemen reporters were present.

So two prison matrons, whom Mrs. Coo called "you darlings," stood in front of Mrs. Coo while her skirt was lifted, that the matrons' skirts might hide Mrs. Coo's leg from "inquiring reporters."

Not liking the look in the face of the woman about to die, the two matrons covered their eyes with their hands. New York state may commit one killing to punish another, but it's a modest state where ladies' legs are concerned, whatever it may do with electrodes.

Modesty in killing women is not new, England stopped burning men alive and started hanging them, but continued for a long time to burn alive all women sentenced to death. The women were not hanged, because British modesty said it would be outrageous to expose a lady's legs while she was dangling at the end of a rope.

If you read all this about savages dancing on the edge of some tropical stream, you wouldn't believe it.

Frank A. Flynn killed a little girl six years old, and yesterday, sitting in court, heard a speech-recording machine tell, in his own voice, how he had confessed. In court the machine said:

"All I can remember is throwing her in the tub * * * throwing her in the water * * * that's all."

In the criminal's own voice, the machine told how he threw the child's body down a dumbwaiter shaft, then:

"I went inside, smoked a cigar, and played the radio."

California and Florida will want to know that there is an acute shortage of lemons in America. Lemon prices have doubled in price, Mussolini commandeering the crop for troops in Africa. If you own two shiploads of lemons, send one to Italy, the other to England.

BOXER SETTLES "Spark Plug" Claim

The out of court settlement the ex-boxer and protege of Mrs. Champion has effected with the estate was not announced. Mrs. Champion, who died last March, was the wife of Albert Champion, who left a fortune of $15,000,000 when he died in Paris in 1928. He had amassed his millions through manufacture of spark plugs.

TRAWLER AFIRE At Sea, 25 Aboard

Year's Hottest

Glass At 90

SHOWERS FAIL TO ARRIVE TO COOL OFF AIR

All heat records for this year were shattered at 3 o'clock this afternoon when the official weather bureau 20 floors above the ground in the Federal building registered 90 degrees

It was warmer by five degrees than the previous hottest day, which was May 27, when the thermometer reached 85.

In an early weather bureau forecast showers had been promised for this afternoon but as it turned out the showers were just a promise and it was warm fair weather that prevailed.

The terrific heat drove thousands from the city as soon as the office buildings and factories in Boston and suburbs had closed for the week-end.

Abandoned City

Revere Beach, Nantasket, Salisbury and Hampton beaches as well as beaches all along the South Shore and Cape Cod, were crowded with bathers seeking relief.

Boston appeared as an abandoned city this afternoon.

Automobile traffic along the South and North Shores was moving at a snail's pace so heavy was the traffic.

Anticipating the large beach crowds extra life savers were enlisted to prevent drowning accidents which have been so numerous during the last two weeks.

Today the first drowning accident was reported from Chicopee where Adam Stanklewicz, 15, of Chicopee lost his life in the Connecticut River.

Highway Patrol

State and local police officials also took action today to patrol the highways in the hope of cutting down the week-end automobile death toll.

Through all towns along state highways local police will join with the state officers in patroling the highways paying particular attention to speed demons and those who cut out of line at dangerous points.

When the sun had set in the sky yesterday five new names were added to the death by drowning toll for the week.

All but one of the drowning victims were children. The other was Miss Lillian Purden, 20, of Montreal, who was swept into deep water by the current in Misisquoi river at East Richford, Vt.

Elmira Walkovitch, 10, of East Ashland street, Brockton, drowned in the Mentello ice pond while swimming with several companions.

She was trying to swim out to a raft, but became panicky when it started to float away from her.

Victoria Campinha, 16, and Mary Lopes, 11, of East Wareham, were drowned together when a barrel on which they were playing in Agawam pond, near their home, drifted away from them.

With the temperature hovering about the 90 mark in parts of the city, some 100,000 took themselves to the beaches The Boston Evening American cameraman hied himself likewise, and although his plates caught only an infinitesimal section of the beach throng, his results were a pretty fair cross section of the general goings-on. Above, Miss Florence Marshall of Edmund street, Malden, just takes it easy at Revere. Inset, Jacqueline and Patricia Ford of Windsor street, Arlington, get their fun out of digging clams. Below, Josephine Szymanska of Pembroke street, Chelsea, accumulates a sun tan, also at Revere.

WHAT PRICE FIGURE

German Girls See Slender Forms Going With "Year on Farm" Edict

By Universal Service

Berlin, June 29—What price glory of streamlined hips and slender legs and arms!

This was today the disturbing thought in many a high bred German miss's mind as she gazed in her looking glass, contemplating her marriageable beauty and the latest of Chancellor Hitler's cabinet decrees.

The decree says that she and all her sisters are compelled, in principle so far, to spend one year "on the land," digging potatoes, feeding pigs, or otherwise helping the farmer's helpful frau.

It states that this may be found necessary to give high born and low born miss alike opportunity.

"To get acquainted with the country."

The new decree made young women between 18 and 25 liable to conscript labor service, subject to special legislation yet to be promulgated.

At present women volunteers for labor service live in camps. When the new law goes into effect they will be housed with the families for which they work.

Dismay over this prospect is not complete. Many young girls are anxious to get away from stuffy homes. In other cases, the fathers of large families will welcome the chance to have their elder daughters support themselves for a year.

FIRECRACKER Alarms State House

State House employes thought the building had blown up today, but it was only pre-Fourth of July firecrackers.

Officials of the fire marshal's office were inspecting a variety of firecrackers and set off a 2½-inch salute.

Scores of workers rushed from their desks and started for the doors when they were told the "explosion" was only a firecracker.

FATHER'S White Lies TO WIFE

FEARED TO TELL BOY IS DEAD

Brockton, June 29—Patrick Moynihan of Grove street, sat beside the bed of his wife in the maternity ward of the Brockton Hospital today, a smile on his face as he gazed on his infant daughter, born yesterday.

He chatted with his wife Mary for a half hour. He told her:

"Don't worry about the house, Mary. Everything is fine at home."

"How is Johnny behaving? Is he doing everything you tell him?"

And Patrick Moynihan answered: "Johnny is a good boy. He is doing everything I ask him."

But the answers that Patrick Moynihan made to Mary concerning Johnny Moynihan, aged nine, were white lies. His heart was heavy.

From the hospital Patrick Moynihan knew he was going to an undertaking establishment to give directions for Johnny's funeral Monday morning.

When Pat talked with his wife he knew Johnny had not done what he told him. To stay away from the Ellis Brett pond.

The boy had gone with two companions to the pond. He dove in once and never came up. His panic stricken chums fled. An hour later when Patrick Moynihan asked one of them where Johnny was he told him.

Patrick summoned police and rushed to the pond. The boy's body was recovered ten minutes later.

Bound Bodies of 2 Found

By Associated Press.

Port Chester, N. Y., June 29—A body, identified by police as that of Joseph Georgiaus, president of the Hydrox Linen & Supply Company of New York city, was found today, tightly bound, in the waters of Long Island sound near here.

Circumstances surrounding the finding of the body were identical with those involved in the finding this morning of a body reported to be that of Arthur M. Collens, Jr., in the pool of Blythewood Sanitarium at Greenwich, three miles away, where he was a patient.

Both bodies were tightly bound with rope, about the ankles and thighs, Georgiaus' arms were tied.

By Associated Press

Greenwich, Conn., June 29—The body of Arthur M. Collens, Jr., 22-year-old son of Arthur M. Collens, Hartford insurance executive, was found today in a newly constructed swimming pool near the Blythewood sanitarium, from which he vanished earlier this week.

Alex Heim, who found the body of the former Williams College student, said the hands and feet had been bound tightly with clothesline.

Medical Examiner John A. Cloke said it was suicide, however.

Female Ulysses on Final Hop

It took Ulysses more than ten years to return from Troy to his awaiting wife, Penlope. Mrs. William McG. Scotten, daughter of Captain John R. Edie, U. S. Navy, retired, prominent in Washington and Bar Harbor, is winging on her way to completion of a much longer journey —5000 miles—from Chile to Bar Harbor, Me., where her mother is ill, within one week. She was snapped hurrying to the Maine-bound plane at the East Boston airport immediately after alighting from the New York air-liner for the last hop of her passage. Kissless Bride Slain, Mate Held Abergale, Wales, June 29—Because his 20-year-old wife did not want children, Harry Wynn, 22, must face trial for murder.

He was accused today of killing his bride, Barbara, eight weeks after their wedding.

The marriage of the young Welsh carpenter and the unsophisticated girl was happy, but loveless, a preliminary police court hearing revealed.

After a quarrel, Wynn is alleged to have told police, he carried Barbara to a bedroom, strangled, then stabbed her with a knife.

"She died as she was born," he told the police, "—a pure woman."

HOLE Shot in PANTS

BUT DUELLISTS' HONOR SATED

By International News Service

Paris, June 29—A hole shot through the trouser leg of former "Mayor" Pierre Godin of Paris today satisfied the "honor" of Jean Chiappe, his fiery successor as president of the municipal council.

Their exchange of shots in the misty dawn in a private garden was terminated when seconds at first thought Godin was wounded.

"I am not hurt," Godin said as he walked off the dueling ground. "The bullet hit my right thigh, but my clothes broke the shock and the bullet dropped to the ground.

"I picked it up and kept it as a souvenir."

Despite its opera bouffe conclusion, the duel was fought in grim earnestness and the enemies left unreconciled.

The affair attracted as much attention as the prospective duel of Jean Borotra, tennis star, and Didier Poulain, sports writer, and like the Borotra quarrel, grew out of a wordy battle in the newspapers.

Chiappe accepted the challenge of Godin, who criticized the conduct of the former prefect of police in his present office.

They met in the pleasant surroundings of the garden of Mme. Cotnareanu, formerly connected with a wealthy perfume-manufacturing family, near the Bois de Boulogne.

Only four witnesses and two surgeons were present, instead of the newspaper reporters usually invited to duels in the customary battle-ground, the Parc du Princes.

Ordinary dueling pistols, of small calibre and containing but one shot, were used.

He paced off 25 steps, then called together the principals and explained the rules. Godin first chose his pistol and Chiappe took the other.

The duellists then took up their stations and stood ready for the first shot.

At a signal from Massard, both fired simultaneously, but neither found his target.

Massard then reloaded the weapons, and gave the second order to fire.

This time Godin fired quickly, and suddenly the realization came dramatically to the witnesses that Chiappe had withheld his fire.

Slowly, deliberately, the "Mayor" of Paris took aim and pulled the trigger while Godin tensely but courageously waited for the shot.

It found its mark on his right thigh, but surgeons who immediately examined him said he was barely bruised.

Borotra's Duel With Poulain Called Off

By Associated Press

Wimbledon, Eng., June 29—The threatened duel between Jean Borotra, France's veteran tennis ace, and Didier Poulain, Parisian sports writer, has been called off, Borotra revealed today.

The two were to have met on the field of honor because of an exchange of acerbities in the Paris newspaper L'Auto over Borotra's decision not to play in the Davis Cup singles this year although he entered the all-English tournament at Wimbledon.

"Everything has been settled to my satisfaction," the Bounding Basque said, "and I have been assured that Poulain never meant that I was a poor sport."

$4000 ARMED HOLDUP

Bandit Pair Bind and Tape Loan Co. Owner, Loot Shop of Gems, Cash

Two gunmen took $3600 worth of jewelry and $400 in cash today from the Hollis Loan Company, 6A Warren street, Roxbury.

A heavy stream of traffic passing the place, which is only a stone's throw from Dudley street elevated station, in the busiest part of Roxbury, did not deter them from making a thorough cleanup of the pawnshop.

Everything of value which could be carried easily was taken and the robbers then vanished in the 9 o'clock crowd.

Drawing guns as they stepped in, the bandits marched William A. Osborne, the proprietor, into a back room, where they taped him up.

They gagged him and taped his mouth, taped his wrists together and then his ankles.

They put him in a closet after taking the keys to the inner compartment of the safe from his pocket. The outer door of the safe was open.

After cleaning out the compartment they pawed over the jewelry in a showcase for anything of value.

Osborne struggled for 20 minutes before getting his hands free. He then broke open the closet door with a hammer and screw-driver, which were among other tools in the closet.

Capt. Thomas S. J. Kavanagh led a squad of heavily armed officers to the scene from the Dudley street police station, half a mile away.

Fingerprint men were sent from headquarters. Osborne said the bandits were each about 25 years old.

RETTICH TRIAL LAWYERS MAP NEW FIGHT

Back in their cells in various jails throughout the state, the Rettich gang, alleged $129,000 Fall River mail robbers, were looking both at the past and the future today.

Their attorneys were conferring with them, hoping to get information that will help in breaking down Herbert R. Hornstein's damaging statements against Rettich and the others.

Attorneys William R. Scharton, representing three defendants from New York; John Creehan, representing Fisher, and Joseph Fitzpatrick, representing Carl Rettich, were gathered in Providence assembling information each had obtained from his clients.

Herbert A. Ried, mail truck driver, on the stand, positively identified Fisher, McGlone and Dugnan as having taken part in the holdup.

Two Federal Reserve Bank employes have positively identified $10,000 found buried on the property of Carl Rettich in Warwick Neck, R. I., as part of the money sent to the R. M. C. Durfee Trust Company, in Fall River, on the day of the holdup. The $129,000 was sent to the Durfee Trust Company.

And Hornstein, who pleaded guilty, named Joseph Fisher and the late Andino Merolo, slain Providence racketeer as original instigator of the plot.

He told the jury that Rettich was to provide cars for New York men to carry out the actual robbery.

NAZI LEFTIST REVOLT BARED

By Associated Press.

Berlin, June 29—Signs of undercover left-wing agitation in the Nazi party appeared today just a year after Reichsfuehrer Hitler's firing squads finished off the "great conspiracy."

Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels, minister of propaganda, ordered storm troopers to march through Berlin tomorrow to "prove the Nazis in two and a half years have conquered Red Berlin and won Berliners' hearts."

Hundreds arrested in the Nazi "blood purge" June 30, 1934, are still in prisons and concentration camps.

Maxie With Favorite—in Pre-Benedict Days

MAXIE BAER MILDRED IVORY

So Maxie has gone and done it again! From many, he chose one. Maxie Baer, ex-champion heavyweight boxer, has finally taken for his bride, Mary Ellen Sullivan of Ithaca, N. Y. How many a pang of envy must be felt by those rumored again and again as the future Mrs. Baer. One of Max's favorite companions in the night clubs was Mildred Ivory, actress. The two were snapped together at the "El Morocco" recently. (Picture from International News Photograph Service.)

appeared from the hotel, where she lives, presumably to go with the fighter to the marriage license bureau.

A few hours before the scheduled ceremony he was as mysterious about the identity of his bride-to-be as he was when he first announced the forthcoming nuptials after an early morning visit to a night club.

He was less reticent about other things.

WANTS BABY TO PIN UP

After telling a reporter that this was the happiest day of his life, he got right down to cases and announced he hoped to have an heir.

"Yes, sir, I want a little girl or a little boy," he said, lounging in his hotel room in an immaculate white suit.

"I was watching a friend of mine just the other day put a diaper on a baby and I thought it was the cutest thing I ever saw in my life."

"But about the bride—," the reported began.

"Aw, law off, will ya," was the reply. "I'm gonna get married this afternoon and I'm gonna hold a press conference here at 4 o'clock and I'll give you all the dope then."

He went so far, however, as to give this description of his intended:

Her name is Mary.
She is 32 years old.
She is a brunette.

NO SMOKES OR DRINKS

She is fond of home life, has never been to a night club.

She doesn't drink, doesn't smoke and doesn't like prizefights.

She is a working girl, now employed in Washington, where she came form New York state.

"I have known this girl for two years," he said. "My mother knows here and approves of the marriage.

"I am building my own home in California where we will live.

"No, she don't like fights; she's never seen a fight."

Did that mean he might not fight again?

"That all depends," he replied. "If I can keep going for four years more I will have an income of $600 a month. Anyone can live on $600 a month."

Pointing to Jay O'Brien, New York sportsman, as his financial adviser, Baer added:

"Everyone thought I was throwing all my money away. He is the man who helped me save it.

"I have an annuity and if I can keep on making the payments for four years and two months more I'll get that $600 a month income."

Two other brothers, William and Francis, and Mary Ellen's father, James P. Sullivan, general contractor, live here.

She has two sisters, Mrs. Walter Staats of Merchantsville, N. J., and Mrs. Peter Noce of Rochester.

'SOAK THRIFTY' BILL SPEEDED IN CONGRESS

By Associated Press

Washington, June 29—President Roosevelt today called upon congressional leaders for prompt action on his "soak the thrifty" plan and a strict limitation of the new tax bill to that proposal.

Chairman Harrison of the Senate finance committee reported the President's views after a long White House talk and announced his committee would assemble next week to begin hearings.

The House ways and means committee also plans to begin taking testimony ~ a few days.

Expressing confidence there would be prompt consideration, Harrison said Congress could complete the bill and adjourn by August 1.

The senator also said the rate schedules advanced this week on the new inheritance, personal income and corporation taxes were tentative and would be changed, very likely downward.

"It is the President's desire," said Senator Harrison, "that the legislation be not delayed and that the issue be not confused by general revision of the whole tax system. He wants the bill confined to the suggestions in his message.

"If the House and Senate follow that policy and the legislation can be curtailed enactment can be accomplished at a much earlier date than if we go into general revision of tax rates.

"So far as the House and Senate committees are concerned they are proceeding as expeditiously as they can."

Socialites Aid Strikers

By Associated Press

New York, June 29—The League of Women Shoppers, sponsored by women outstanding in social theater and business life of New York, went to the aid of striking workers in the Petrie-Red Robin stores.

The organization announced it would join the strikers on the picket line this afternoon.

Helen Kay, executive secretary, said stock room employes of the stores walked out after the firm failed to live up to conditions that prevailed under the NRA code.

"The employes won recognition of their union in two previous strikes," Miss Kay said.

Under the presidency of Aline Davis Hays, wife of Attorney Arthur Garfield Hays, the organization grew out of the efforts of a group of women to aid strikers at a local department store.

Prominent in the league are Mrs. Hamilton Fish Armstrong, Peggy Bacon, Mary R. Beard, Margaret Bourke-White, Ethel Clyde, Dorothy Day, Mrs. J. C. Guggenheimer, Suzanne La Follette, Fola La Follette, Margaret Lamont, Eva La Galliene, Cornelia Bryce Pinchot, Mrs. Jacob Riis, Tess Sleighter and Mrs. Stephen S. Wise.

Curiosity Does Kill Cat

By Associated Press

Chicago, June 29—It is now on record that curiosity did kill a cat —one named Mae West.

Mae, who worked as a mouser in a South Side tavern, tipped over a can of paint while endeavoring to learn what it was. Then she got her foot, or, rather, all four feet, in it, and it made her mad. Literally.

The cat scratched several patrons, bared on the bar and knocked off two liquor bottles.

The proprietress, Mrs. Mae Culverton, tried to chase the cat, but, instead, with her son, Thomas Culverton, was chased.

A policeman was summoned and shot Mae West dead.

U. S. Sends Ace 'G-Men' Here for Dope Ring Drive

The type of Federal investigation which in recent months has terrified super-criminals all over the country will be introduced here in connection with the new deal in narcotics prosecutions, it was learned today.

The most trusted and the most efficient agents in the government's anti-narcotics forces will swing into action in New England within 10 days.

Ruthless warfare is all that the dope ring leaders can expect, according to federal authorities.

Up to now, except in a few instances conspicuous by their rarity, the dope ring chiefs have been living on the fat of the land while "small fry" traders only fell into the clutches of the law.

Tip-Off Wrecked

Now—with an elaborate tip-off system which they had established already wrecked beyond repair—these chiefs have already taken to cover to await a chance to study the new set-up in the federal organization.

Out of the murder of Joseph ("Red") Sweeney at the Cosmos Club—out of the discovery of dope peddling at Deer Island—out of the easy escape of a band of Chinese with most of their contraband despite a carefully laid trap—comes the new deal which will find William E. Clarke here from Minneapolis to assume the New England command.

But more important still is the fact, now disclosed, that there will be many new faces in the New England anti-narcotic force, to the confusion of the dope gangs.

Wholesale transfers are predicted.

Several men recently arrested in Boston were found to have descriptions of several federal narcotics agents in their possession, together with phone numbers, enabling them to find out whether the agents were "in the field," and information about the goings and comings of autos used by the government men.

Rivals of Police

Another feature of the new deal is expected rivalry between federal agents and Boston police in nabbing big shots of the dope industry.

The United States grand jury, which complained to Washington about being hampered in its attempt to stamp out the worst features of the dope evil, also recommended that connection between federal agents and Boston police be severed.

Under former Police Commissioner Eugene C. Hultman, the police dope squad was whittled down to one man—Special Officer John F. Curran.

Eugene M. McSweeney, the present commissioner, appointed Sergeants Thomas F. Joyce and Frank Bombach, and Special Officer Francis L. Sweeney to join Curran in a permanent squad, and ordered full co-operation with state police.

Some success has been achieved but it remains for police or federal men to "beg" some of the real dope profiteers before they can boast about any success.

ABYSSINIA'S KING DEFIES ARMIES OF MUSSOLINI

By Universal Service

London, June 29—"If war comes, I will lead my armies into the field myself, but I don't expect to meet the man upon whose orders the Italian troops march."

Thus did Haile Selassi, Emperor of Abyssinia and Lion of Judea throw down the gauntlet to Il Duce in an interview given the London News-Chronicle correspondent in Addis Ababa.

The ancient strategy of the Judeans and the armies of Sheba's Queen, from whom the Abyssinian ruler claims direct descent, will be used with the King himself deserting the safer quarters in the rear of the fighting lines and leading his troops personally in defense of the last independent kingdom in the dark continent's vast domain.

He told the correspondent:

"I'll lead my armies into the field myself with the ark of the covenant, borne by the Ethiopian Pope, near me just as in the times of the old Judean kings."

The Emperor, however, expressed faith in the League of Nations and the big powers' ability to avert the war which threatens his kingdom.

The Emperor said that, if successful in the possible war with Italy, he would follow the example of the Emperor Menelik who withdrew to the mountains after defeating the Italians and refrained from enlarging his territory at their expense.

Hitler Said Silent on Duce Amity Move

Paris, June 29 (US)—Premier Mussolini's move for reconciliation with Chancellor Hitler and for a rapprochement between Italy and Germany has come to nothing, it was revealed here.

Following Il Duce's bold "Italian protectorate over Abyssinia or war" declaration to Britain's Captain Anthony Eden, Hitler did not even answer Mussolini's alleged feeler, it was learned in authoritative German quarters.

It was stated that Mussolini made no approach directly to Berlin through diplomatic channels, but through an unofficial person known to be in his confidence.

This party, it was alleged, sounded out in Berlin whether Hitler would not enter into negotiations for a five or ten-year truce over the question of Austria, similar to the truce with Poland over the Polish Corridor.

Hitler, it was declared, did not react, made no answer, and would not discuss the subject.

Pay-Ahead Rush on Taxes

Despite the heat, six long lines of taxpayers jammed the city collector's office at City Hall today to pay taxes that are not yet due.

Under a new law in effect this year, half the real estate tax may be paid before July 1, and the rest in instalments of 10 per cent.

Many appeals have been made that taxpayers pay this half now, in order to save the city interest on borrowed money, but it is not compulsory.

In the first five days of this week $1,700,000 was received in taxes, and today's rush was expected to net another million. Tax officials were hopeful of another big rush Monday.

Curley to Present Bond Plea; Canada Tour Off

Governor Curley announced this afternoon he would go before the Legislature in person Monday to ask authorization for a $35,000,000 bond issue for "work and wages."

This plan necessitated cancellation of his scheduled air trip to the Canadian maritime provinces, on which he was to have started tomorrow. Elaborate plans had been made for his reception there.

"I will answer all criticism of the proposed bond issue in my message," he said.

"It will not affect the tax rate. The method of meeting the necessary charges will be the same as employed on former Governor Ely's $8,500,000 bond issue of 1931, which expires this year.

"The charges will come out of the gasoline tax. The proposed bond issue will not saddle any great burden of debt on the state.

"And it will be of tremendous benefit to cities and towns, for it should make possible the transfer of 10,000 men from the welfare rolls to the payrolls.

"It will also mean keeping up the prevailing rate of wages as compared with the lower wages on certain government projects. This standard has been built up over the course of decades and is now in danger of being broken down.

"The projects contemplated cover so wide a range that I will not elaborate on this phase of the matter until Monday, but I may say that included in the projects are a veterans' memorial building, an addition to the State House and expenditures for public health and education."

Dorothy Forbes Becomes Bride in Wellesley

By BETTY ALDEN

THE POET SAID "What is so rare as a day in June, especially if it be your wedding day," or words to that effect, and it is quite obvious that engaged young maidens thoroughly agree . . .

But the days of June are fleeting and unless a fair maiden enters the state of matrimony before tomorrow night she'll have to wait till another year rolls around to become a June bride . . .

DOROTHY FORBES

Three prominent society girls were married today . . .

At an afternoon ceremony in St. Andrew's Church, Wellesley, Dorothy Forbes, daughter of the ultra-distinguished Forbes family of Wellesley, was escorted to the altar by her handsome father, Mr. F. Murray Forbes, to become the bride of Mr. John Aiken, son of Mrs. Henry Ives Cobb of New York, and of Mr. Albert John Aiken of Pawling, New York . . .

Six Attendants

A SMALL WREATH of lilies of the valley in her hair held the bride's cream-colored net veil in place . . . her wedding gown was of sheer tucked white net and she carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley . . .

Six bridal attendants, all in stiff white organza gowns, preceded her down the aisle . . . In the group were her sister, Cynthia Forbes, Mrs. Daniel A. Davis (Bobsy Ellsworth) of New York; Miss Elizabeth Sanders of New York; Ramelle Cochrane, a cousin of the bride, of Boston; Rose Whitman of Hamilton, and little Diana Forbes, niece of the bride as flower girl . . .

With their white frocks they carried large bouquets of blue larkspur and in place of hats wore garlands of larkspur in their hair . . .

Reception Held in Garden

WEARING a lavender crepe dress, with an amethyst colored picture hat, Mrs. Forbes looked exceedingly lovely as she entered the pew reserved for the bride's family . . . Mrs. Cobb was attired in a smart brown sheer ensemble . . .

The wedding reception was held in the spacious gardens at "Deskrie," the Wellesley estate of the Forbes family . . .

Mr. Charls S. Barton of Worcester was the best man, and the usher corps included eight prominent young men of New York and Boston social circles . . .

Mr. and Mrs. George R. Fearing, a sister of Mrs. Forbes, entertained the bridal party and the younger group of out of town guests at a dinner dance last evening at Rose House, her country estate in Westwood . . . Mr. and Mrs. Forbes and Mr. and Mrs. Cobb, the bridegroom's mother and her husband, were guests of honor at a dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. J. Gardiner Bradley . . .

The bride made her debut in 1931-32 and is a member of the Junior League and Vincent Club . . . Mr. Aiken graduated this month from Harvard and belongs to the Hasty Pudding, Institute of 1770 and the Porcellian Clubs . . .

The wedding and reception were attended only by the immediate families of the bridal couple and, with the exception of the best man, there were no attendants . . .

The bride wore a wedding dress of white organdie, the sleeves and yoke of which were appliqued with old family lace . . . Her tulle veil was attached to a small cap of the same old lace and she carried bride's roses and lilies of the valley . . .

Madeline Murphy Weds in Hyannis

A BRILLIANT seashore wedding took place this morning when Miss Madeline Grace Murphy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Murphy of Hyannis, became the bride of Mr. Charles Leo Hughes, of Warren, R. I., at St. Francis Xavier Church, Hyannis.

Rev. Eugene V. Hughes, pastor of St. Theresa's Church, Pawtucket, R. I., a brother of the bridegroom, performed the ceremony; the Rev. Edward V. Hughes, also a brother, and curate at the Church of the Assumption, celebrated the nuptial high mass. Mr. James Murphy gave his daughter in marriage.

Miss Murphy wore a bridal gown of old ivory satin, princess mode, with long train and veil of tulle with a small face veil which was thrown back from her face after the ceremony. Her white prayer book held a marker of lilies of the valley.

Pale green chiffon, with feather cape and large picture hat, was most becoming to Mrs. John P. Curley of Auburndale, sister of Miss Murphy and wife of the head of the athletic department at Boston College. With her gown she carried a bouquet of yellow tea roses.

Classmates Aid

Miss Harriet Davis Butler of Hyannis was maid of honor and Miss Marion McDonnell of Portland, Me., Paulyne Fitzsimmons of Gardner, Christine Zubatis of Manchester, N. H., classmates of the bride at Regis College, and Charlotte Mahoney of Billerica, formed the bridesmaids group.

All wore chiffon costumes similar to the matron of honor, Miss Butler's being of peach shade, with a bouquet of talisman roses, and the rest in softest yellow and orchid tints.

Carol Curley, of Auburndale, was the dainty flower girl. Mary Murdy of Hyannis, niece of the bride, bore the long satin train down the aisle. Master Robert Cross O'Brien of Centreville was the page.

New Vogue in Powdering

Satin-Smooth Finish to Skin Is Achieved With Aid of Powder Brush

By THE BEAUTY EDITOR

WHEN SUMMER giddiness fills your soul with the mad desire to go on a cosmetic spree, and you want to buy everything from amethyst eye-shadow to diamond stars for your hair, it's time you were motivated by some degree of logic.

If you have ever been to England, you know the year-round loveliness of English complexions. Spring is always in the air, and skins have that fresh, dewy quality that puts one in mind of Devonshire meadows on a radiant May morning.

It's all very true that English weather with its mists and its fogs brings quiet to the nerves and spring to the soul. The climate of England means life and vitality to skins of all ages, be it June or November.

But don't think that because most English women are born with naturally lovely complexions they don't know all the little tricks of making-up. The glamour which they radiate exists only because they take the time and trouble to make themselves alluring.

No matter what you think about English women and their clothes, and their funny little hats, you've got to agree that their complexions are something pretty special.

Maybe, they were born with the faultless loveliness which you so envy. But don't ever kid yourself into believing that they don't take infinite pains with their toilets, even as you and I.

A famous English beauty who is now visiting Boston takes ten minutes every time she powders her face. But when she has finished, her skin has that delicate loveliness that compels you to stare like a 16-year-old.

How does she succeed in getting the powder and rouge on so evenly, I wondered! And then I asked her. She told me it was a trick. A trick in the form of a combination powder-and-rouge brush.

"I'm simply mad about it," she confessed. "I don't know how American women can get along without one. I use this brush on my face every morning, and my powder stays 'put' right through the day. It is truly amazing."

One end of this dainty, soft brush is for powder—the other rouge. After applying a foundation cream or lotion cover your face with a thick layer of powder, using a large down puff. Powder luxuriously from the hairline to the base of the throat, over the eyelids and under the chin.

Then with the brush, flick off the excess powder, always using light upward strokes. Do the same with the rouge. You'll simply be amazed at the result —one of uniform evenness.

This same powder-and-rouge brush is now on sale in a Boston store, and if you are interested in seeing what a delicate, ethereal look you can achieve, they will be glad to give you (free of charge) a complete make-up with this self-same brush. I might add that it is inexpensive and will last you for years.

To learn the name of this new powder-rouge brush combination call Juliet Shelby, Liberty 4000, or write to her at the Boston Evening American, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Beauty Answers

Question—My scalp seems to be inactive. I am sure that it is not functioning properly, because the hair is dry and brittle. Finger waves only seem to last a few days, and then I can't do a thing with my hair. If you know of any scalp exercise or treatment, I would be very pleased to have it. Mrs. Marion Di A., New Bedford.

Answer—Your scalp probably needs waking up. If it is drowsy and lazy and not functioning properly, the hair growth will become emaciated, and naturally it won't behave nicely. The night before the shampoo trickle on hot mineral oil. Get a bright grade so that it will not be gummy. It washes out of the hair very easily. Every night massage the scalp. Lift it away from the skull and send the flesh into little hills. In other words, paw and maul it. It will make the blood streams dance. There is an inexpensive scalp tonicade on the market which is excellent for revitalizing hair of this type. To obtain the name of this product, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Beauty Editor.

Stephen Keeps Custom

CHAPTER 57

The friendship of Stephen and Ho was threatened. Since that night in the launch when each let down the barrier of his own culture and entered into friendship, only once had they seriously misunderstood each other.

That had been at the time of the death of the old tai-tain, when Stephen had seen there were ways in which he could not trust Ho.

Now it was Ho who did not understand Stephen—and over the same matter.

There was nothing more important in the eyes of Ho than the proper gift for the proper occasion.

Among his own people he kept the custom, and he was not a little proud that he understood the foreigners' custom which set the day of giving on the birthday of their god, rather than that day of greater rejoicing, the New Year.

And he was not a little pleased, too, with his choice of gifts, especially with his gift for the tong ja.

Bearer of Gifts

With ceremony he entered Stephen's office, shaking his own hands in salutation, for he abhorred the western custom of touching another man's hand even the hand of his friend.

A servant followed, his arms heaped with red-paper parcels.

Stephen rose to greet Ho, pleasure in his eyes. There was the ceremony of bowing between the two friends, then Ho motioned the servant to come forward.

He took from the pile of gifts a long narrow package. Holding it in his two hands, he proffered it to Stephen—the gift of Ho to the tong-ja's wife. Stephen, as he took it, knew by the shape and weight that there was silk within.

Now the great Ho, injecting into his manner even greater ceremony, bowed gravely, and placed a second package in Stephen's two hands.

The package was small and, Stephen hoped, not valuable, for an order had gone out from the main office forbidding company men to accept gifts of value from the Chinese in their employ.

Some of the presents given the men of late had smacked of bribery, they said.

Ho Is Angered

As Stephen opened the little box, Ho spoke, "In token of our friendship." There before Stephen lay a gold ring. Without alloy, he knew, the gold was so yellow.

And upon the top, cut into the gold, was his name, in Chinese characters, done in reverse for use as a seal.

It was a beautiful thing, and Stephen coveted the possession of it.

He held it for a moment in the palm of his hand. Then he turned to Ho saying gravely, "You have made it difficult for me, friend. Do you not remember the letter from the Company that was sent to each of the agents two moons ago? I showed it to you, did I not?"

"Ai," said Ho. "That is understood with the agents of the Keepers of Light. But between us, there is no Company standing. That I said long ago."

Stephen sought to explain that if he took the presents, all his men would feel free to do the same. And that he must accept also the presents of the agents, setting the order of the Company at naught.

At first Ho persisted, thinking it could not be that his friend refused his gift—it was only good form to demur before accepting. Then suddenly, he knew that Stephen would not accept the ring and he was angry. His cheeks glowed golden yellow.

"Throw it away then," he cried, "and the silk after it! I will not have them!" He flung his words about the room in great gusts of sound.

In Ho's eyes, Stephen realized, there was an implication in his refusal to accept the ring—a hidden insult. He had accused Ho of wanting to bribe him! Squeeze, he had accused his friend.

Then, at the moment when he felt that their friendship was destroyed, a way out occurred to him. The barriers of their two ways of thought had erected themselves so suddenly that he had forgotten there was a solution.

"Ho, my friend," he cried eagerly, "I can accept cigars, cigarettes. And I will accept, I will accept."

But Ho said nothing, only snorted like a great porpoise. Then he turned and went out so hastily that the skirt of his long gown blew out behind him.

Stephen was unhappy, unable to take satisfaction even in the jade bracelet, his Christmas gift for Hester, which he felt, a hard substance, in his pocket.

Would the compromise he had suggested save Ho's face sufficiently to re-establish the relationship? Nothing, of course, could heal the disappointment of Ho over the ring—or his own disappointment, for that matter.

He would have liked to own the ring, to have worn it as a token of Ho's friendship.

That evening, as he went about his dressing in preparation for the Christmas party, his spirit was heavy. He could think only of the loss of his friend.

Not wishing to talk, he hurriedly completed his dressing and went out, leaving Hester.

"Damn the company's ruling," he said. "Why can't they trust us to decide for ourselves?"

Then Kin entered, presenting the card of Ho, and behind him, carrying a tray loaded high with cylindrical boxes of cigarettes, came the coolie.

Behind him followed the office coolie, carrying a tray stacked with boxes of cigars. Behind him was the cook with another stack. And behind him, the outside coolie, with another.

Gravely Stephen received these offerings, ordering one of the tables to be cleared, so all could be piled upon it.

Then he gave Kin his card to send to Ho and, hastily wrapping money in the remains of some red paper Hester had been using, he told Kin to give it to Ho's servants who had brought the gifts. Thus carefully did he keep the custom.

Perfect GIFTS for GRADUATES

By MRS. BEECKMAN

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

I have been invited to my fiance's sister's commencement exercises, as she is graduating from a school of nursing, and I plan to attend.

1—I should like to have you inform me as to what sort of gift I should give, and if I should send it to her beforehand? I would feel rather embarrassed if I were to hand it to her personally.

1—You might, if you wish, send this young lady a corsage to wear on her graduating day, or you might send her a more lasting gift a day or two before her graduation.

Sending the gift is easier for both the giver and the receiver. A purse for day-time or a lovely white bag for evening wear are always welcome gifts.

A pen and pencil set is another appropriate graduation gift. For a nurse a traveling item is a good choice, a fitted over-night bag, for instance, or a compact case for her toilet articles.

And sheer white monogrammed handkerchiefs are an excellent gift. A pocket comb in a case will surely appeal to her, or a gold key chain with a gold tag for the monogram.

ADVICE on LOVE by BEATRICE FAIRFAX and NELL BRINKLEY

No Career Worth Giving Up Motherhood

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

BABIES are the best old-age insurance in the world. Careers do not last forever.

A woman's name may twinkle in the white lights of Broadway, and keep a queue wriggling outside of the box office, season after season; but the day will dawn, sure as the sun rises, when her name is supplanted by another.

"Art is long and time is fleeting" said the poet, and he might have added the statement that more fleeting still is the approbation of the public. Gruelling hard work, real talent, sincerity, faith in one's self—all the ingredients that make up the formula of success—are bound to give way in time to a newer formula, compounded by someone else.

Women who have forsworn maternity because they felt the world needed their genius are doubly lonely in old age, when the applause and the handclapping are centered on newer idols. Recall how the great Elisabeth lamented a childless old age.

GENTLE UPBRINGING

The safest prescription for old age, whether one has or has not talent—I forbear to use the word genius—is a family. Not children flung hither and thither by the whimsies of divorce, or ruined by self-indulgence, or spoiled to the last degree by parents as a prop to their own egoism, but children who have been decently reared.

So, when the various moving picture magazines began to shout hallelujah and clash the cymbals for Norma Shearer because she walked off the set in "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" to observe the duties of maternity more conscientiously, it must have seemed to normal people just plain horse sense.

Women of real achievement have never shunned maternity in the belief that the world could not dispense with their talents for the short time necessary to have a baby.

FOR POSTERITY

In Paris today they are naming a street after Marie Curie, who discovered radium. Madame Curie had none of the delusions about having children which are so often conspicuous in women of mediocre gifts. Her contribution to science cannot be overestimated, and it was while she was bearing and nursing children that she carried on the experiments which gave the world radium. At the same time she was carrying coal up four flights of stairs to a poverty-stricken Paris flat.

To modern girls with jobs, pay envelopes, professions, the world of education and opportunity open to them, the name of Elizabeth Cady Stanton may not mean much. And yet if it had not been for this woman and that valiant spinster, Susan B. Anthony, who worked with her, these jobs and pay envelopes, and the votes for women which insured these things, might still be a long way off.

DUSE AND BERNHARDT

But Mrs. Stanton had a large and happy family, which she never neglected while carrying on the work for her own sex.

The two greatest actresses in modern times were mothers: Eleanora Duse and Sarah Bernhardt. Ellen Terry had children. Schumann-Heink and Madame Homer, whose voices had made the world happier, both have had large families.

No woman who stops her public career long enough to have a baby has any need of sympathy. She's merely exercising good judgment and horse sense. It may be a grand experience to see one's name acclaimed in glowing headlines, or twinkle in lights from theaters, but it's even more inspiring to claim for your very own that miracle of delight—a baby.

What Went Wrong?

By Nell Brinkley

WHY didn't he propose? Because he wondered, and wondered too hard to get it out of his mind, if it was his money she wanted. Was her pretty hand reaching for the fabled golden apple of Happiness, or was the apple the gold of Wealth? Was that what she wanted of life and marriage, assurance of plenty of pretty clothes and sparkle, furs and travel, and a snug establishment in town and a lovely place in the country, all the things that make the material side of a lady's life downy. That and that alone? Did HE matter at all? Except as a presentable husband.

That's what he somehow got in his head, and it grew there like unpleasant plants of the darkness. They say—I don't know anything about it at all, never having really seen that in a man's mind—that once that notion has gotten fixed in the mind of a man, young usually, with plenty of worldly goods, romance hides its head, his eye is jaundiced, and some girl who really liked him for himself —and his money only as something lucky on the side — wonders "what happened to HIM?"

Perhaps the poor girl put on sophistication that didn't really belong to her—thinking to impress him. Perhaps her new evening gown had too much the look of Paris, and he thought her grasping.

And expensive. Poor young rich man who wanted to be loved for himself alone!

NELL BRINKLEY.

Bridge

Without a Life Line

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Very often an overcall after the other side has opened the bidding will scare off an opposing no-trump bid.

The side which holds the great majority of the strength may often be afraid to bid no-trump if neither partner has a good stopper in the opponents' suit.

Expert players have learned in the later stages of the bidding to co-operate, so that with a partial stopper one partner will bid notrump.

The following deal illustrates the means by which two expert players reached an unbeatable game contract in ...stroke, though neither had a trick in the suit in which an opponent had overcalled.

East, Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
Pass	1 ◇	2 ♣ (1)	2 ◇ (2)
Pass	3 ◇ (3)	Pass	3 ♡ (4)
Pass	3 NT (5)	Pass	Pass (6)
Pass

(1) West's alternative was to make a takeout double. He avoided this bid because he did not consider his hand quite strong enough to force a responses from his partner.

No player could be criticized for doubling on this type of hand, however, because of his distributional strength for the major suits and his possession of a safe rescue suit.

(2) Lacking a biddable suit and a club stopper, North could do nothing better than raise the diamonds.

(3) South was also seriously hampered by the club overcall. His distribution was ideal for notrump, particularly after his diamond suit had been assisted.

(4) North clearly showed that his heart suit was at best a shaded suit, for otherwise he would have bid it immediately.

(5) Having previously inferred that he could not stop the club suit, South could now bid notrump and feel confident that North would not misinterpret the bid.

(6) North passed because of his doubleton Queen of clubs. With anything less in the club suit he would have been forced to return to four diamonds.

South made the notrump game with ease. West, reading the bidding properly, knew that both declarer and dummy were afraid of the club suit,

Rubber Evening Gowns Are New

Hug Figures Snugly

By DOROTHY ROE

A RUBBER EVENING dress is the latest innovation to startle the sophisticates.

It caused a mild sensation when worn by a nonchalant debutante at a New England beach club recently.

Of the white crinkled variety, it hugged the figure snugly, in the rubber bathing suit manner. The gown was of a lastex crepe, and not the pure rubber used in swim suits, but it stretched just as obligingly.

Lastex evening gowns already have achieved some prominence, being shown in satins and crepes, designed to mould the figure into a streamline silhouette.

A wine-colored turban and wine gloves and slippers complete the picture.

They also are showing lastex hats, in small turbans and stitched-brim affairs of silk and linen, guaranteed to fit any head-size, and to stay on in any wind.

Fashion Flash

SOME of the newest earrings shown in the shops consist of small fabric flowers, such as a single violet, or a cluster of forget-me-nots, mounted on a clip.

You wear them to accentuate the color note of your costume, or with a matching necklace of the same device.

You've heard already of the enamelled flowers that are being worn in earrings and for boutonnieres.

Mother of pearl also is coming into its own in accessories, being shown in handbag clasps, belt buckles and in monogram clips for the dress or bag.

The turban scarf is almost two yards long, and twists around your head in the best Hindu manner.

The sash is worn knotted around your shirtwaist frock or tennis with the ends dangling carelessly in front or at the side.

If you prefer, you may wear one of the scarfs around your neck, as a tie for your sailor blouse, or as an ascot scarf with your summer suit.

Lace Beach Ensemble

THE LACE beach ensemble is one of fashion's headliners. And to make it even more wicked, the lace is black.

A brief swim suit of black coin-dot lace is shown, with accompanying black net beach pajamas, consisting of slacks and a Bolero jacket.

The swim suit is made of the Lastex lace that took Paris by storm earlier in the season, and is lined at strategic points, to keep within the law.

SHOULD SHE TELL ON AVIS?

CHAPTER 385

I WAS IN anything but a mirthful mood as I listened to Hugh's strictures on Edith Fairfax, and her attempt to "get over" to Dicky the tale which Avis Arlen had repeated to her.

But at Hugh's naive pronouncement that Avis Arlen's part in the scheme to rouse Dicky's angry jealousy of me, had been simply that of an "innocent child," who had seen something that roused her amusement and repeated it without malice—I felt an almost irresistible impulse to laugh aloud.

Avis Arlen an "innocent child"! Avis Arlen so naively youthful, so ingenuous that she could see nothing but pure amusement in the little scene she had witnessed, and who was guiltless of investing it with any touch of malice when she had related it to Edith.

CHANCE FOR REVENGE

For I know, as does every woman who has been acquainted with Avis Arlen for more than twenty-four hours, that while she is youthful in years, she is far more sophisticated and "catty" than many a woman twice or thrice her age.

Resentful to the point of fury, at me for the part I had played in thwarting her efforts to wreck the wedding plans of Mary and Noel, she was avid for any chance to do me an injury.

The little scene she had stumbled on as she opened her bedroom door to the hall, just at dawn, must have been meat and drink to her vengeful appetite.

What she had believed about it in her inmost soul had nothing to do with the interpretation of it which she had given to Edith.

That she had retailed it to Edith, knowing full well that Edith would tell it to Dicky at the first opportunity, I knew as well as if she had actually told Edith to repeat it and I had heard her direction.

BOUND TO SILENCE

But such is the feminine code that, because of Hugh's romantic interest in me and the matrimonial campaign which Avis, with her mother abetting her, was waging, with Hugh as her objective, I could say nothing which would enlighten him concerning the malevolence with which Avis had told the story to Edith.

No girl of Avis' generation could have enlightened him without violating her code of conduct.

No other woman in whom Hugh had an interest and who, therefore, could be branded as "catty" by the women of her circle, could utter a word which would shatter his illusion concerning the naivete of Avis.

An older woman, on terms of ordinary friendship with Hugh, could enlighten him—Lillian could enlighten him.

I was suddenly aghast at the impulse which had seized me to repeat this speech of Hugh's concerning Avis to Lillian. That was all that would be necessary.

Her trenchant, caustic tongue would make mincemeat of the pose which Avis had so successfully managed for Hugh's benefit. And how she would revel in the job!

HUGH'S RELIEF IN AVIS

But my instincts, my early inhibitions, my years of training, kept me from an action which I always should have regretted with humiliation and self-abasement.

Not by so much as the traditional lifted forefinger could I say or do anything to disillusion Hugh concerning Avis.

I was conscious that Hugh was looking at me curiously, and realized that my little introspective revery had taken longer than the flashing second with which one is usually supposed to encompass a lifetime of retrospection.

I wondered, a bit panic-stricken, if his telepathic mind had perhaps gleaned something of my thoughts; was sure of it, when Hugh said quietly, with a quizzical gleam in his eyes.

"You evidently do not share my opinion concerning Miss Arlen's guilelessness."

Sherbets

SUNDAY NIGHT DESSERTS

By MARTHA LEE

IF YOU WANT an economical dessert as well as a dainty one try this Raspberry Sherbet and chocolate cookies made from a single can of sweetened condensed milk.

There is enough sherbet for six and three cookies apiece! Why not have it for tomorrow night's supper. It's an ideal Sunday night dessert for it can be made early in the morning and it is very partyish!

RASPBERRY SHERBET

2-3 cup sweetened condensed milk
2 tablespoons lemon juice
2 tablespoons melted butter
⅓ cup water
1 cup crushed fresh raspberries
2 egg whites

Blend sweetened condensed milk, lemon juice, melted butter and water. Add raspberries which have been rubbed through a strainer, chill. Beat egg whites until stiff and fold into chilled mixture. Pour into freezing pan. Place in freezing unit. After mixture is about half frozen, remove from refrigerator. Scrape mixture from sides and bottom of pan. Beat until smooth but not melted. Smooth out and replace in freezing unit until frozen for serving. Serves six.

COCOA DROPS

2-3 cup sweetened condensed milk
2 tablespoons cocoa
1 cup nut meats, chopped
1 teaspoon vanilla

Blend thoroughly sweetened condensed milk and cocoa. Add nut meats; mixing well. Drop by spoonfuls on buttered baking sheet. Bake in moderate oven (350 deg. F.) 15 minutes or until delicate brown. Remove from pan at once. Makes 1½ dozen.

And here is a suggestion for an easy dessert for warm evenings—Charlotte Russe. It is made by placing split lady fingers or small strips of sponge cake around the edge of sherbet glasses, and filling in the center with a cream filling made from sweetened condensed milk. The filling may be varied to give several different flavors. These recipe make enough for 4 to 6 servings, according to size of sherbet cups.

FRESH RASPBERRY CREAM SAUCE

2-3 cup sweetened condensed milk
¼ cup lemon juice
1 teaspoon grated lemon rind
½ cup water
½ cup fresh raspberries.

Blend thoroughly sweetened condensed milk, lemon juice and grated lemon rind. Stir until mixture thickens. Add water blending thoroughly. Fold in raspberries.

STRAWBERRY CREAM SAUCE

2-3 cup sweetened condensed milk
¼ cup lemon juice
1 teaspoon grated lemon rind
½ cup water
½ cup strawberries, sliced

Blend together sweetened condensed milk, lemon juice and grated lemon rind. Stir until mixture thickens. Add water blending thoroughly. Fold in sliced strawberries. Makes 1 2-3 cups.

PINEAPPLE CREAM SAUCE

2-3 cup sweetened condensed milk
¼ cup lemon juice
1 teaspoon grated lemon rind
1 cup drained crushed pineapple

Blend together sweetened condensed milk, lemon juice and grated lemon rind. Stir until mixture thickens. Add pineapple. Makes about 2 cups. May be thinned with water to any desired consistency. Serve on cottage pudding, sponge cake, spice cake or gelatin desserts.

Spanish Maine Plans New Duplicity to Get Hidden Fortune Into His Hands

The Story So Far:
CONSUELA VANBRUGH, passenger on the S. S. Amazon, returning from South America to England is having the happiest time of her life.

A fellow-passenger, Sir Harry Vane, prominent young Englishman, has fallen in love with her and they plan to marry at his home in England.

But at Barmuda, Manoel ("Spanish") Maine boards the ship and wrecks their plans. He recognizes Consuela as something out of his checkered past and threatens to expose her, unless she pays heavily.

Her brother, Otis Vanbrugh, who has never heard of Maine before, sees him to get at the bottom of his story. Maine tells him an amazing story of his life of crime which has covered the world and in which he claims Consuela is involved.

Twice he has been in the Foreign Legion, twice escaped, with a long series of murders and crimes behind him. Twice he has had a great fortune in his grasp only to lose it because of Consuela.

In his last Legion escapade he had buried a treasure in a deserted well in the Sahara, only to be separated from it by a lifeterm in the penal colony of Mayoni in South America. His whole life is now centered on getting this treasure, which will keep him forever in luxury. Things look hopeless until he becomes boson friends with Miguel Braganza, another Spanish convict.

Together they make a daring escape from Mayoni, largely through Miguel's skill and bravery. Close to freedom, Miguel falls ill, Spanish Maine robs him of his money and deserts him. He continues his tale to Otis:

Of course I did not explain to Guilmes as we sat sipping champagne and smoking dollar cigars in his beautiful apartment

PUSHING off, I paddled all day; drifted all night; rested on a sand-pit next morning; paddled on again all day; drifted all night; and, to my surprise, at sunrise the following morning, I found that I was passing a village, a settlement that showed that I had reached civilization.

The next day I arrived at Paramaribo.

Money talks. In this case it said that I was a man of substance and position; a traveler; an explorer, a mad Englishman who had made his way—for the sake of doing something uncomfortable, different, difficult and dangerous—from the hinterland of British Guiana down through Dutch Guiana to the sea.

I bought clothes, a complete outfit; had my hair cut and my face clean-shaven; moved into the best hotel in the place, and engaged a berth on the first ship leaving Paramaribo.

This I discovered was going, not to Holland as I had hoped, and as would have suited me very nicely, but to Buenos Aires.

However, Buenos Aires was safe, and an, place that was safe would suit me well; and from Buenos Aires I could get a first-class liner to England or Spain, any day in the week.

Never shall I forget the sensations with which I walked on board the Andalusia—miserable tub though it was—watched her cast off, and saw the coast of Guiana recede and sink from my sight—for the first and last time, please God.

MY hope and intention had been to go to Europe.

Fate took me to Buenos Aires and almost the first man I met at the bar of the Hotel du Monde, probably the finest and costliest hotel in the world, was an old acquaintance whom I had known in the French Foreign Legion, and had once across again in a penal battalion.

And who and what do you think he was—beside being an old comrade of mine? He was the famous Zigzig Guilmes, supreme head of the South American branch of Le Milieu.

Zigzig Guilmes escaped convict from Ile Royale in French Guiana! None other. Fact!

Here he was, safe in Buenos Aires, at the very top of the tree; from captivity, desertion, and misery—to wealth, position, and every luxury, at a bound.

Le Milieu had made him rich.

What is Le Milieu? The Middle? The Center?

It is one of the most powerful, wealthy and widespread organizations in the world; the great Confraternity of White Slava Traffickers; also running an incredibly profitable side-line in drugs—cocaine, morphia, heroin, opium, hashish, veronal, chloral and such.

Risky, of course, but with profits in proportion. Immeasurable profits.

ZIGZAG had known me when I was heavily bearded and moustached. I was now clean-shaven, and looking twenty years older than I looked five years ago. In point of fact, I scarcely knew myself, the first time I looked in a mirror, after the barber at Paramaribo had done with me.

He had accepted me for what I was; but, although we had served together in the Legion, he had not recognized me, could in no wise remember me or my name—both of which facts pleased me mightily.

For if an old comrade failed to recognize me, I was pretty safe; and if Zigzag Guilmes became my friend, I had the freedom of Buenos Aires, and no fear as to my financial future until I should regain my treasure.

He did become my friend; I did have the freedom of Buenos Aires; and I was relieved of all anxiety as to ways and means of getting to Ain Mendit and my buried treasure.

In me, Zigzag Guilmes discovered what he was looking for; exactly what he needed; a cher collegue with absolutely and identically the qualifications that were required; the ideal Cafiaus.

What he was looking for, and had found in me, was a man who could speak French, Spanish, German and English; who could move with equal grace and ease in society, in the best clubs, the finest hotels and liners, as well as in that of the underworld, the cavaau castle, the night-club, the thieves' kitchen and the brothel.

What he was looking for was a man of the assured, easy, well-to-do type, of whom no one would have the slightest suspicion, whether young girl or experienced police-agent; a man of the world; a man about town; sportsman, clubman.

But at the same time, tough as steel; hard as nails; and, when necessary, ugly as the ugliest situation that could arise; a man, moreover, who, so far as the law was concerned, had burnt his own boats behind him and was now in the same boat as his employers and superiors of Le Milieu.

For it was in eight countries that Guilmes operated—Spain, France, Germany, Belgium, England, America, Austria and Algeria; the four languages of which I could move as a visitor or resident of position and standing.

I WAS to be European representative for the eight countries with which he dealt. I was to be forwarding agent, secretary, treasurer and overseas manager!

Excellent! I could take an advance from Guilmes; go to Spain, Angeria and the Sahara at his expense; secure my buried treasure; and then retire from business of every kind, especially such risky, if profitable, business as that of Le Milieu.

I had had all the prison I wanted and did not intend to run my head into the noose again. With my fortune of three-quarters of a million pesetas I should never have to live dangerously again—dangerously so far as the law is concerned.

Of course, I did not explain this to Zigzig Guilmes as we sat sipping champagne and smoking dollar cigars in his truly beautiful appartement.

I permitted him to assume that I was only too willing to go in on the ground floor and rise to the top one, by virtue of his patronage and help; only too thankful to shine in the light of his countenance for the rest of my life—instead of informing him that I merely wanted a good time in Buenos Aires, a good sum on account funds for working expenses and a free trip to Europe.

After an extremely pleasant month in Buenos Aires; full initiation into the local phenomena of South America; its supply and demand; of special local requirements, both in the city and the campo; of the technique, methods, difficulties, dangers and problems of recruitment; of the business aspects of the different sides of the business; I took a fond farewell of my Chief—whom I hoped and intended never to see again—a considerable sum of money by way of working expenses, an instalment of salary, and the good ship Rey del Pacifico for Vigo in Spain.

Spanish, in the next instalment, tells how fourth woman tricks him. He plans for revenge.

PENSION EDITOR ANSWERS FLOOD OF QUESTIONS

By THE PENSION EDITOR, BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN

Because of the great number of letters inquiring about the Federal and state pension, the pension editor is forced to choose the queries which he answers every day with great care in order to make a representative distribution.

Although each question-answer applies to the definite individual whose initials appear below the inquiries, the same question is asked by scores of other readers, and thus the answer applies also to them.

Follow this column and the daily news columns of the Boston Evening American for the latest developments in the status of the pension.

If you are in doubt about any phase of the pension act, write to the Boston Evening American pension editor.

HAS SIX DEPENDANTS

Today's questions follow:

Q—I am 68 years old, have 10 children, six of them dependants. Have been out of work three years. I am not a citizen. One of the children is a crippie. Can I get the pension?

E. G., Wrentham.

A—You cannot get a pension for you are not a citizen. You can, however, get aid for the crippled child, if under 21, from a special fund allotted to the states by the government in the new pension act.

Q—I can fulfill the requirements for the new pension. I am at present getting a small pension from the firm for which I worked. Do I also get the new pension?

J. R., Providence, R. I.

A—If the pension which you receive from private industry is sufficient to take care of your needs, you are not eligible. If, however, the sum you now receive is not enough to take care of you, the state will furnish thy extra money needed.

Q—I am receiving welfare aid in my home city. Can I get a pension, too?

M. E., South Boston.

A—No. If you are of the age to receive the pension, you will be automatically switched from the welfare rolls to the pension list.

Q—I am not a citizen, but have lived in the United States for 50 years. Two of my sons were disabled in the World War. Am I not eligible for the pension, then?

Mrs. I. N., Cambridge.

A—No. Citizenship is positively required. You are, however, eligible to apply for veterans' relief as a dependent parent.

TRY APPEAL BOARD

Q—I have appealed to the local board for a state pension, but they keep refusing to give me one. Who can I appeal to?

F. T., Brockton.

A—There is an appeal board at the state old-age assistance bureau, Ford Building, Ashburton place, Boston.

Q—I am going to take a three months' vacation in New Hampshire. I observed that an individual applying for the pension must have lived in the state one year before applying and five of the nine preceding years. Will the vacation be judged as a violation of the one-year residence before application rule?

N. J., Lynnfield.

A—No residence is judged a place of domicile. You may take the vacation.

'MIDDLE ROAD G. O. P.' URGED

By Associated Press

Eastern Point, Ct., June 29—A "middle of the road" policy was advocated today by Lewis E. Goodsell of Bethel, Ct., at the two-day New England Young Republican conference.

To hundreds of delegates Goodsell said he hoped the conference was not going to be "another damn Roosevelt party," and added:

"We don't have to show up the fallacies of this administration. They are quite evident. Never was a man tumbled from the heights of popularity as has Franklin D. Roosevelt. Members of his own party are repudiating him.

"Let us keep our 'Lizzie' in the middle of the road. As young people we do not have an 'axe to grind.' We are sympathetic to the working man and the farmer. We do want the manufacturer and the merchant to prosper, for when they prosper the whole country prospers."

Wallace Stearns of Boston, chairman of the Young Republicans of Massachusetts and permanent chairman of the New England conference, told the delegates they have "an opportunity to bring back our nation to sanity that includes free men, free press and free institutions."

$10,000 Blaze in Peabody

Peabody, June 29 — A general alarm fire following an explosion caused $10,000 damage today to the building of the A. C. Lawrence leather plant in Crowninshield street.

The blaze, according to Fire Chief William C. Mahoney, was caused by the explosion of a blow torch used by workmen making repairs on the six-story wooden building.

Damage was confined to machinery and materials in the sheepskin department.

A hot air explosion shattered windows in an adjoining brick structure and driven workmen employed in the building escaped injurey as they had left work for a short period at the time.

Danno Can Save Milk Fund Show | New York Hails New Mat Champ

By JACK CONWAY

(Pinch hitting for Austen Lake, who is on vacation)

TWO PICTURES: Dan O'Mahoney, Irish heavyweight wrestler, now recognized as world champion in 38 states and in all foreign countries, leaving for New York in the company of Jack McGrath, his manager.

Mr. Boston

Jack Curley is anxious to talk with O'Mahoney and McGrath in regard to his Milk Fund show scheduled for the Yankee Stadium on July 8.

Curley had Jim Londos signed to meet Chief Little Wolf, and had the match highly advertised. Old Manhattan was placarded with pictures of Londos and Chief Little Wolf when I was there for the Louis-Carnera bout.

This 22-year-old sensation is the darling of the crowd. Our American public likes their champions young, powerful and colorful. Danno qualifies in every respect.

O'Mahoney has already agreed to meet "Jumping" Joe Savoldi at the Auditorium at Atlantic City on July 3. Then he may clash with Chief Little Wolf on July 8 in New York.

After that he will head West for bouts in Chicago and St. Louis. The West wishes to acclaim the young Irishman who was good enough to lick Londos.

In St. Louis and Chicago the newspapers got out extras on the O'Mahoney-Londos bout. Mrs. Tom Packs, wife of Tom Packs, St. Louis promoter, heard the news of O'Mahoney's victory as she came out of a moving picture show.

"Londos beaten by O'Mahoney," shouted a newsboy.

Mrs. Packs called her husband on the long distance telephone to Boston. She was crying.

"We're ruined," she said over the wire.

Tom Packs felt Londos' defeat keenly, but at that time was trying to get O'Mahoney to wrestle for him in St. Louis. He succeeded. Mrs. Packs can save her tears for the Dean brothers or for Londos.

At the South Station O'Mahoney showed me a bunch of telegrams and cablegrams. They were from all parts of the world.

"Hail the new champion!"

That's about what most of them said.

The world loves a winner.

Thousands of people follow Danno every place he goes. He promises to be the most popular sports figure since the days of John L. Sullivan. He has youth, a pleasing smile and tremendous athletic ability.

If O'Mahoney were a boxer, he would draw a million dollar gate with Joe Louis. Maybe if the young Irishman wins from Ed Don George, he will try to annex the boxing as well as the wrestling title.

Anybody with his potential athletic possibilities can accomplish anything in sports he sets out to do. O'Mahoney did some boxing while in the Irish Free State army. He throws as natural a right hand punch as I have ever seen.

Londos Says He Will Stage Comeback

THE OTHER picture: Jim Londos dropping in at Paul Bowser's office as he prepared to leave for New York.

"I have just come from the doctor's office," Londos tells me. "I suffered some broken ribs and a broken bone in my right arm in the O'Mahoney bout."

I asked Londos the name of his doctor. He referred me to Dr. Edward B. Sullivan of Huntington avenue. I called Dr. Sullivan on the telephone in the presence of Londos.

"Did you examine Londos, doctor?" I asked.

"Yes," replied Dr. Sullivan.

"What did you find?" I pressed.

"He has a fracture of the second and third ribs," declared the doctor. "Just where the breast bone joins the sternum. He also has a piece of bone broken in the ulna bone of the right forearm.

"The piece of bone that is broken is about as big as a walnut. Londos also has some torn ligaments and a partial dislocation."

I asked Dr. Sullivan how long it will be before Londos will be able to wrestle again.

"Ten weeks at least," was the reply.

I thanked Dr. Sullivan for his information.

Londos to Visit California and Then Europe

Londos looked a bit crestfallen. He told me he planned to vacation in California for a month and then to take a trip to Europe.

"I want to visit in Athens, Greece," he said. "That was my birthplace. I am now an American citizen and will return to this country by December. I then hope to wrestle O'Mahoney again."

"What do you think about the Irishman?" I asked.

"He's very strong and tireless," said Londos. "And he knows more about wrestling than I thought he did. He didn't give me a chance to rest. He went from one hold to another.

"I don't like to offer an alibi, but you know what the doctor said. Maybe if I had not met with those injuries I would have won."

"The fact O'Mahoney injured you so much proves he is very powerful," I said.

"It does," admitted Londos, "but don't count me out as a wrestling headliner. I have lost only two bouts in five years.

"I was beaten by Savoldi in Chicago three years ago, and then by O'Mahoney. I defeated Savoldi in a return match and will conquer Danno if we meet again. Do you think he will give me a return bout?"

I said I did. Young athletes never object to meeting a veteran they have beaten. They figure their aggressiveness and youth will win.

Londos said goodbye, and told me he would see me when he got back from Europe.

I could not help but admire him. He has been one of the greatest athletes of modern times. For years he has turned back the rush of youth. At 38 he wasn't quite able to stop O'Mahoney, who is only 22.

I don't believe Londos will ever be able to defeat O'Mahoney, but I didn't tell him so. I felt a bit sorry as I saw him go his way.

I have a soft spot in my heart for these old sports heroes. Dempsey, Ruth, Lewis, Londos, Hagen. In time they are all swallowed up in the reckless rush of youth.

Balios Wins 3d To Pay $69.70

DAILY DOUBLE HITS $316

By Ed Coggswell

Narragansett Park, R. I., June 29—Racing's hottest day of the season brought out the largest crowd of the Narragansett early summer meeting as close to 25,000 overflowed the stands and lawns here this afternoon.

It was a betting-minded crowd and one which gave promise of sending along a record mutuels handle before the eight-race program was concluded.

Form players were off to a good start when Wee Tune, heavily backed favorite came with a late rush to pull out the opening race victory from Great Lover which looked all over the winner coming up the stretch.

A fine hand ride by Jockey Stevenson, only recently arrived from New York, and making his first riding appearance at Narragansett, turned the trick. Stevenson almost lifting the winner into the wire by sheer strength. Jessie D. M. took the show behind Great Lover.

Clever handling of Jair by Jockey Linzenberger brought home the 10 to 1 shot the winner of the second race. He made his play in the stretch when he swept past Zowie, which took place position over the favorite, Harold's Way.

Balios supplied the big surprise in the third race by handily winning to pay the biggest price of the meeting, $69.70, $20.80 and $10.10 across the board. Jockey Wall rode a heady race, laying to the pole till the stretch and then bringing his mount up to take command.

The winning of Balios gave the daily double bettors of the Wee Tune and Balios the best pay-off since the innovation when the board registered $316.

BILLY JORDAN INTRODUCES JIM JEFFRIES AT RENO

JOE LOUIS, BROWN BOMBER OF 1935

Two great ringmen, Joe Louis and Jim Jeffries. But which would win, could they be paired? Hype Igoe discusses this today.

Joe Louis Today No Match for Jeff

Hype Igoe dreams that he takes Joe Louis, the Brown Bomber, to see one of the murderous scraps between two of the greatest scrappers that ever lived, Jim Jeffries and Bob Fitzsimmons. Could Joe stand the gaff in a fight with the winner? Hype wonders and then gives his emphatic answer.

By Hype Igoe

Jim Jeffries can hardly be rated with the great hitters of all time, but he enjoyed the distinction of twice knocking out Bob Fitzsimmons, once for the heavyweight title and once in defense of that same honor.

This feat wasn't all that he accomplished against the dandy clouters! In 1897, the first year of his career, he held Joe Choynski, one of the world's hardest hitters, to a 20-round draw. Gus Ruhlin went to a 20-round draw with Jim in the same year and came back in 1901 to be knocked out by Jeffries in five rounds.

Jeffries was the champion then, having toppled Ruby Robert to win the title in 11 rounds in his 11th start as a heavyweight.

Three years later, Jim gave Freckled Bob a chance to regain that title in San Francisco. I saw the battle. It was held under a circus tent and it will always stand out in my memory as one of the most picturesque spectacles in ringland.

"Daddy of All"

Came my man, the bald-headed one, "Ruby" Robert, greatest puncher of his day and, to many ring historians, the "daddy of them all" when it came to scientific hitting.

I only wish that Joe Louis, the Brown Bomber, could have been sitting there in the press row with me. His observations would have been most interesting, but since this is a page from our dream book of ring dramas, I'm going to pit him against Jeffries with the crushing left hook.

If we are to consider dropping this twenty-one-year-old hitting wonder down among the immortals of the past, he'll have to fight big Jim some day.

So I now invite Joe to sit in the press row beside me.

Miss Ciccone Takes Girls' Net Crown

Elena Ciccone of Newton retained the junior girl's tennis championship after a bitter duel with Louise Hedlund of Watertown this morning on the Longwood Cricket Club courts, beating Miss Hedlund 6—1, 2—6 and 7—5.

Albert Everett, Jr., of Brookline, captured the boy's division crown for the third year in succession, whipping Bill Washburn of Waban 6—1, 6—2.

Miss Hedlund, daughter of Oscar Hedlund, M. I. T. track coach, gave the more experienced Miss Ciccone a terrific battle, coming from behind in the final set after the Newton girl had run the set to a 4—1 margin, and managed to draw even at five all. A double fault and Miss Ciccone's service gave her the victory as she ran out on the next two games to win the championship.

GOLDEN GLOVES RING THE BELL

AIDS INTERNATIONAL AMITY

By Bill Corum

New York, June 29—The arrival of the British amateur boxing champions, who will compete against America's Golden Glovers in Tuesday night's tournament in the Yankee Stadium, brings to mind a point that this column has intended making for some time.

The battle cry of all international sports is that it brings about a better understanding among the competing nations and ments fellowship and good friendship among the competitors.

By and large, that's the bunk.

Go back through the years and you will find that international sporting events, particularly those involving so-called amateurs, have been a hotbed of bitterness, phoneaching and misunderstandings.

We need look no further for an example than one of the last international sporting contests between these same two nations—the ill-fated America's Cup yacht race off Newport last September.

GENTLEMEN

All hands aboard finished that delightful bit of gentlemanly rivalry with protest flags waving, and what the boisterous blue-blooded sailor boys of both sides had to say about one another in private would set afire to these pages if printed. Tsch, tsch, tsch.

The whole affair, to tell the blunt truth, bordered on the rude nosethumbings of a couple of slightly spifflicated fish wives.

There are times when the only way one can tell a gentleman, with a capital G, from any other roughneck is to look him up in the social register.

But for some time we have had the feeling that these international golden gloves boxing bouts hit the right note in sportsmanship.

And one of the reasons for this, we suspect, is that there are not a lot of beribboned and be-medaled officials hanging around looking for the best of it.

Ninety times out of a hundred the trouble does not start among the competitors, anyhow. They say it is the innocent bystander who is most likely to get hurt in a street brawl.

By the same token, it is the "innocent bystander" who is most likely to start a sports hair pulling and eye scratching.

It is the non-combatant who is the most ferocious fighting man in any sort of war.

Which makes these Golden Gloves boxing tournaments such a pleasing novelty. All the fighting is done in the ring by those who are scheduled to do it. The boys can fight, too.

Joe Louis was a Golden Glover, and it was a Golden Gloves boxing medal that gave him the ambition to become a boxer in the first place.

One of Joe's boy friends came home from some tournament or other with a medal pinned on him. Joe took one look and wanted one, too. You know how boys are about such things.

He asked where it had come from and was told.

JOE LOUIS

"I'd sure like to win one of them," sighed Joe.

"Why don't you try?" advised his friend. "You're as big as I am."

The next day Joe was in a Detroit gymnasium. The next year he had a breast full of boxing medals.

And the year after that, which is now, he is knocking on the not too stoutly barricaded door of the heavyweight championship of the world.

Because we sincerely feel that these international amateur boxing shows do promote amity and understanding, it is a pleasure to put, as the boys say, the boost on for them.

Haas, White in Final

Washington, June 29 (US)—Fred Haas, sophomore golf captain at Louisiana State University, won his semifinal match in the National Intercollegiate Golf Championship at Congressional Country Club against Johnny Fischer of Michigan, 3 and 2.

Fischer, a Walker Cup star, could not get his putter working and as a result lost for rich ring trophies, he shouted:

Haas took advantage of every three-putt green and never at any time during the match was he down.

ONE-HIT GAME For Cub Rookie

Chicago, June 29 (US)—Roy Henshaw, Cub rookie, pitched the best game of his career here, holding the Pittsburgh Pirates to 1 hit, a double by Mace Brown to lead the home guard to an 8 to 0 shutout victory.

Henshaw, despite wild streaks, was invincible.

Gabby Hartnett, with a home run and five singles, led the 12-hit Cub attack.

JEFFRIES Of '04 Better THAN LOUIS '35

taught him that poise and it became as famous as Jeffries himself.

Louis, sitting beside me sees Fitzsimmons shuffle up to Jeff with his gangling, knock-kneed stride and pop Jeff right on the snout with a terrific left to the chin. With that starting punch, Joe is destined to look upon one of the worst thrashings a heavyweight champion ever got in the prize ring.

Crouch Fails

Louis watches intently as old Bob keeps muscling Jeffries with the most cruel left hand attacks heavyweight history has ever recorded. The crouch, the Ryan guard against such attacks, doesn't seem to be working.

I lean over and speak to Brown Bomber:

"Mister Jeff can take it, Joe, can't he?"

"I MEAN he can take it. That old Mister Bob sure can belt that big fellow inside the belt, but he ain't knocking him down nohow, and I likes to see them upraul, I'd do. I think he ought to step closer and shorten that left hook link I do."

Old Bob continues his left hand cleaving. Jeff's eyebrows are slashed wide open now and torn flesh is dropping down into his eyes, hindering his vision. Jeff keeps wading into manslaughter. He was a courageous champion and reigned king as king on the premise that nothing in the way of human power could dispose of him, when clouked in the royal purple.

Only the sixth! Yes, sir, but how anything built of nerves, flesh and blood can stand and have any sort of pounding still is one of the questions I sometimes ask myself about these fancy boxers. I'll bet Jeffries' Bomber leans over and talks to me:

"Why doesn't Mister Jeff stand up out of that crouch? Nobody, if he did, Mister Bob wouldn't be able to tag him so often. He has studied that crouch there in training. You can see that plain able to tag him so often. He has studied that crouch there in training. You can see that plain as day. I think if Mister Jeff stands up straight and leans back, Bob won't hit him so often. As it is he's going blind under those belts. He has taken a lot, sure has taken a lot."

Well, they go into the seventh round. Jeffries is a hideous wreck of a really great champion. Never in all the seven years of his unremarkable career—from sparring partner to the world's heavyweight title—has he taken such a drubbing.

Battered

All the hurts, wounds and lumps of all his battles put together couldn't have reproduced the bloody mound which Jim Jeffries had called his head less than half an hour before!

The seventh—and old Bob beginning to wilt! He wasn't hitting so hard! Jeff was coming like a Rocky Mountain freight engine upgrade, powerful, brave, unrelenting, unbowed!

The eighth and a tragic ending to the first Rocky quest for his lost crown. Jeff's still powerful left swing caught the old red-head squarely in the belly.

Easily, the punch could have killed an ox. Bob went down in a ghastly crumple, his bald head seeming to roll along the floor in front of his descending, freckled body. They counted, a million it seemed to me, but he wasn't up in time for anything but what was to have been his swan song.

Jeff had worn the usual maroon-colored gloves. Bob's, by some strange whim of his, were olive colored. He asked his seconds to change gloves with him. Then as he took the gloves and, tossing one this way, the other that, into two fighting corners for rich ring trophies, he shouted:

"Gentlemen, I have fought my last fight. I have been beaten by one of the greatest men who ever lived."

His hands had been broken to cracker dust! The next day Jeffries couldn't have worn a barrel for a hat!

"Joe, you saw what you saw. Can you whip Mister Jim Jeffries?"

Joe looked admiringly at the huge form of the boilermaker as they left the ring down the stairs and then answered:

"I surely don't know, Mister Hype. I surely don't know. Maybe, but I don't know for sure. He sure is tough—and so game."

Yes, he was game for the Bomber. The Joe Louis we have—as IS— couldn't have whipped the Jeffries that WAS champion that night!

Blackburn Started Louis Up Hill

By JACK CONWAY

The Joe Louis management was fortunate in securing Jack Blackburn to train and coach the "Brown Bomber."

Blackburn was one of the greatest lightweights ever to put on a padded glove. He had much amazing skill that he often defeated heavyweights.

Jack would spot an opponent 60 to 70 pounds, and give him a boxing lesson. It was almost impossible to nail him with a direct hit.

Blackburn told Louis hitting power and the ability to take a punch did not make for ring success.

"If you get hit too often, you won't last in the boxing game," Blackburn told Louis, "You also need skill to keep from position to let your punch fly.

"I met a great many good hitters in my day, but most of them couldn't lay a glove on me. They lacked skill in the delivery of a punch."

Blackburn spent hours drilling Louis in blocking off the rough spots in Joe's boxing.

It was Blackburn who picked the weak spots in Carnera's defense. Joe had failed to score with right hand punches to the jaw in the early rounds. Louis had kept his guard high.

As Louis prepared to leave his corner for the fourth round, Blackburn shifted the line of attack.

"Shoot your punches to the body, and the will bring down the big fellow's hands," said Louis.

The style of warfare succeeded. Carnera's hands came down in the fifth round, and even more so in the sixth.

Blackburn grinned. He was pulling the wires from the corner that was gaining victory for Louis.

Following his ten-round victory over Paolino, Joe met "Broncho Bomber" went to Pittsburgh to battle Hans Birkie.

He tried for a quick knockout, but failed. The go went ten rounds, and Louis gained the decision.

The bout had served its purpose. It gave Blackburn a line on some of Joe's weaknesses. The veteran gave Louis some more drills in the gym.

Louis went to Los Angeles, and knocked out Ramage in a return bout in two rounds.

JOE AND MOTHER

Louis then stopped "Red" Barry in San Francisco in three rounds. He was given a tremendous greeting when he arrived back in Detroit.

They were talking of matching the "Brown Bomber" for a New York bout. He was the talk of the fight world. He next agreed to meet Natie Brown in Detroit.

Joe dropped Brown with a left hook in the first round. Natie then went to the defensive. He was badly licked, but managed to weather the 10 rounds. The decision went to Louis.

The ending of the bout wasn't satisfactory to Louis or to his manager, John Roxborough and Julian Black. Blackburn also felt Joe should have done better.

"Joe walks 'em, but doesn't know how to put over the finishing punch," said Blackburn. "It is time for to teach Joe how to finish his job."

There were long gym workouts. Louis then stopped Roy Lazar in three rounds, Biff Benton in one, Roscoe Toles in six, Willie Dabies in three and Eddie Stanton in three.

"Pack your grips, Joe," said John Roxborough. "We're going to New York, where you're going to knock out Carnera."

Jack Conway will have another article on Joe Louis in Monday's Boston Evening American.

Armful Wilson's Choice in 1st

By Dave Wilson
Selections made for Fast Track
BEST BET—STAINFORTH

Narragansett Park, June 29—Stainforth, hero of the 1934 rich Aberdeen stakes at Havre de Grace, appears to outclass an indifferent lot of non-winning three-year-olds since June 1 in the six furlongs of the fifth stanza here on Monday afternoon.

The strapping son of Happy Time and La Muiron is a half-brother to the great stake winners Tred Avon and Monel. The brown colorbearer flattered his backers by going to the front at the break and cutting out a fast pace until the stretch, where he tired as if a trifle short of work.

FIRST RACE—ARMFUL, IRISH TED, SHYNO

ARMFUL turned in a corking second to the highly regarded Sun Dancer last trip. Contention, if any, will likely be furnished by IRISH TED, a first time starter. The latter is bred in the purple and has been literally burning up the track in morning trials. SHYNO, fast and faint hearted, will prove hard to catch if she leaves the gate running.

FIRST RACE—$1000, claiming, maiden, two-year-olds, five furlongs.

P.P.	Horses	Weight	Jockey	Prospects
13	Armful	102	Winters	The best on form.

WALTERS, INFIELD FAILURE, NOW GRADE A PITCHER

HOLDS Braves RUNLESS DURING STAY ON MOUND

By Joe Cashman

Bill "Bucky" Walters, a failure as an infielder with both the Braves and Red Sox, has developed into one of the most promising pitching prospects in the majors with the Phillies.

In fact, "Buck" is more than a prospect as far as his club is concerned.

Under the expert handling of Manager-Catcher Jimmy Wilson, the young Philadelphian has become a regular starter and one of the most consistent winners on the Quaker staff in no short space of ten weeks.

The last game of last season saw Walters' debut on the mound. He worked a few innings against the Braves and wasn't too hot. He had only a fast ball and it hit everywhere but over the plate.

His first start this season was also against his former teammates in the only game the Phils played on their previous visit to town.

He showed improvement flashing a nice curve as well as his "hard" one, but he still lacked control and had to be relieved in the fifth inning.

THERE IN PINCH

On his next appearance Bucky, he shut out the Cubs and bequeathed himself more credit than on the bill ever since between whirls in the outfield.

Local fans discovered why when "Bucky" was elected to start the third game of the current series at the wigwam.

He didn't gain the $25 bonus he gets from some Philadelphia admirer for every victory he turns in, but that wasn't on his mind.

When he left the game with one out and a runner on first in the last of the ninth he hadn't allowed a run and enjoyed a two-run lead.

And he had shown everything a pitcher needs to be—great control courage and plenty of stuff.

He had no easy sailing. The Braves threatened in every frame but the eighth. But he was equal to every emergency.

Three times the Tribesmen had a runner on third with only one gone, and in two other frames they got a runner around to the fag corner with two gone.

"Bucky" saw to it though that they didn't score. That's real pitching.

WILSON DID IT

In addition to his fast ball and curve, the kid displayed a sweet slow ball as well as uncanny ability to hit the spot he was aiming at.

Considering his very limited experience, the advancement he has made is truly remarkable and a tribute to Jimmy Wilson's managerial genius.

Both Bill McKechnie and "Pinchy" Harris had moments when they thought of using Walters out as a hurler as they watched his powerful but erratic arm at third base, and realized that his hitting and fielding were below par for a major league infielder.

But instead of going through with the experiment, they allowed him to drift back in his home town where Wilson lost little time in ordering him to the hill.

CAMILLI CLOUT

It's unfortunate, from a Boston standpoint, because both the Braves and Sox could find plenty of use for a pitcher of Walters' calibre today.

"Bucky" didn't win the Thursday game because Syl Johnson, who relieved him, threw a home run ball to Tommy Thompson, hitting for Frankhouse, which tied the game in the ninth.

It served a dumb move on Wilson's part to remove the kid. But "Bucky" is still weak after an attack of "flu," and it's probable the intense heat was getting him.

The Phils won the game in the tenth when Dolph Camilli made your envoy eat his words by pounding out home run No. 15 off Bob Smith.

We had opined in this corner that the answer to Dolph's home run total is the short fence at Philly.

There's no question that the closeness of his home barrier helps him, but on this occasion the visiting first-sacker parked the ball more than 400 feet away.

Hovey's Nears Golf Diadem

By Bill Grimes

Judging from recent scores and activities announced a store expansion plan which apparently gripped Hovey, has team to such an extent that Capt. Joe Howe and his confreres are now well on their way to the Red Stores League title.

During the Eastern Intra-Stores Trade Board Association annual tournament a few months ago this five Capt. Howe was awarded one first Class B prize and A to members posted the highest gross card a 143.

DODGE 84

Brady, Joe Howe Hoyt and Lesser Moore, represented the C. F. Hovey Co. in the competition for the cup, and they came through with fitting scores surpassing six other contenders for the beautiful trophy, which was donated by Dave Moorer of Concord & Co.

Although there were nine contestants in Class A, Brady won by a margin of five strokes over Rod Dodge, Jordan Marsh Co.

Charlie Eaton, a former state junior champion, was presented with the second gross as Dodge figured in one of the net awards. Charlie was 45—3—42, while Dodge went out in 43 and home in 41 for an 84.

For his 79, Brady was presented with a set of Hazan irons while Eaton received two quarts of very appropriate liquid nourishment, which were donated by S. S. Pierce Co., with which store he is connected.

Frank Vorenberg, Gilchrist topped the reduced scores in Class A, despite the fact that he has played little golf this season and is fisher by a pair of golf shoes.

Dodge was given the Hovey trophy Leo Daz, and Rich Wagner, Conrad's, received a dozen golf balls for getting third net.

BITNER PERFECT

Early was presented with a bag, which was donated by Gilchrist. Kelly now is the owner of the "Dynamizer" and Hoyt received a bag.

Larry Bitner played a perfect round, for when his handicap was deducted from his gross score, he was even par. He was the only contestant in the field to accomplish that feat.

Reading that Larry is 100 per cent Filene's, B. G. "Bunny" Hawkins, general chairman of the tournament, presented the Class C winner with an expensive travel bag from Wm. Filene's Sons Co.

Shanahans Take Park League Lead

The eight teams in the Boston Park League have passed the half way mark and will now settle down to the strenuous grind for the four playoff positions.

The race to date has been closer than expected. At the outset two or three teams were standouts on paper but the card games are won and not right on the field, and some of the clubs will find this to their sorrow before the final bell is rung around the first of August.

In a fray of its own over the Casey last night the second on successive evenings Jerry Shanahan and his boys from the suburb of Brighton have a half game on the rest at the top.

They are closely followed by the Caseys with 25 points, and the Hennigans with 23.

St. Augustines have begun to fight hard and have more than held their own over the past week. They have 20 points just two ahead of Lazarus from Forest Heights.

The Maddens club of Roxbury gives some pitchers who prove dangerous as the race is the battle for third fourth position.

Wolfs put on a winning drive this week, taking two victories, but were stopped last night by the Maddens.

The feature games next week appear to be the Roslindale-St. Augustines clash Monday at Fallon Jordans-Hennigans Wednesday at Jefferson and the Casey-Jordans Friday at Neponset.

Jamboree world pace Arlington inaugurated a few weeks ago for Boston Twilight League competition will be the attraction at Hoyt Park Cambridge tomorrow afternoon when the Jefferson nine entertains a Sunday afternoon crowd.

The Miller Oil team of Waltham will play at Lowell with the Cambridge Cubs take the train to Fall River to meet the Maynard team in the Bay State Industrial Park.

Manager Eddie Carnation Arrington stickers pounded out ten safe hits at Waltham last evening, and the Malden boys Bitterhouse and Murray featured with double. Murray got in a pair of them besides swinging in four trips up.

Arlington twirled Dan Sullivan in real attraction. Any team that can take Miller Oil 6 to 2 has something.

The Lowell fans were disappointed last evening at the showing the Lynch club made. The Cambridge team was hitting but had no power.

They made it interesting until the fourth inning when the French nine hopped on Marsh and put across a cluster of 10 runs to help win, 15 to 0. Dave Concannon pitched and a double. Barker got three for three.

'All' Teams Clash

The championship game in the Greater Boston interscholastic high school series will be played this afternoon at Victory Field, Watertown, between the All Boston High team and the All Mystic Valley League team.

Ray Chamberlain of Watertown High will be on the All Mystic mound against Jimmy Cleary of Commerce, who gave the All-Suburbans only one hit in an 11-inning game the other night. A keen pitchers' battle is expected.

The Mystics won their way to the final by beating the All Middlesex and then drawing a bye.

Your entry must reach the "Daily Double" Handicap Game Editor of the Boston American, P. O. Box 1946, or deliver to 5 Winthrop Square, Boston, not later than 1 P. M., Monday, July 1.

Here are the Rules:

To play the "Daily Double" Game name the horses you think will win the first and third races at Narragansett. Then place the names of the horses you believe will run second and third in each of the two races.

20 pairs of tickets to the Narragansett Races will be given each day to winners.

Winners will be picked under the following rules:

Entries that pick the "Daily Double" will be given first consideration. Should there be fewer "Daily Double" winners than there are prizes, winners of the remaining tickets will be scored as follows: First counts 8 points, second counts 4 points, and third counts 2 points in each of the two races. The entries scoring the largest number of points will be declared the winners.

In the event there are more "Daily Double" winners than there are prizes, the prizes will be given to the "Daily Double" winners who score the largest number of points in selecting the horses that run second and third in the first and third races. In scoring these winners the following rules will be observed: Place counts 4 points and show 2 points for each race. Tied contestants will each receive a ticket.

In the event any of the horses you pick are scratched, the next horse will be automatically moved up one space on your list. For example, should your first choice fail to start, the second horse named becomes your first choice and the third horse your second choice.

Except where horses are scratched, your selections must run in the order in which you list them on your entry blank in order to be counted. ONLY THE NAME OF ONE HORSE MAY BE SELECTED WHERE THE HORSES ARE COUPLED IN BETTING, AS IN ENTRIES AND FIELDS. The decision of the judges will be final and no entries returned.

A coupon for Monday's "Daily Double" selections will be printed Saturday.

Each day's winners will be printed in all editions of the Boston Evening American the day after the races are run (Saturday's winners in Monday's editions).

Thrills in 'Stranded'

Kay Francis and George Brent Star at Metropolitan

By MARTIN HANNON

George Brent and Kay Francis are once again in our midst, this time in "Stranded," the Metropolitan's current film feature.

Kay Francis

The work of the Theatre Arts Society artists in building fraternity is admirably bound up when Mack Hard meets Lynn Palmer gaily presiding at her desk in the information station.

Lynn is a girl of independent means who has taken up the work through a spirit of love for her fellow man. But her bridge - building friend looks down his nose at her charges. And small wonder when he has to cruise all over town in a taxi with a group of giggling brides fresh from Central Europe and the Orient. The sweethearts quarrel and separate over this same point.

One Sharkey, a bumpkin of the worst order, enters on the scene. He is selling protection to the bridge builders; and Mack, forthright fellow that he is, kicks him out.

Sharkey undermines Hale's work crews and cuts up all over the place, until Miss Francis quells the trouble with a few well-chosen words at a labor meeting. The ending is as happy as it is inevitable.

* * *

There are story weaknesses in this film, to be sure, but none the less it is good entertainment. Thanks to good direction, capable performances by its stars, and a few fairly gratifying thrills, "Stranded" becomes a diverting photoplay.

Miss Francis is as beautifully garbed as ever, and very good to look at. One wonders a little wistfully, however, if Miss Francis would not have turned out to be a very good actress had she not so early in her career been stifled in the latest Adrian mode.

George Brent is pleasant as usual, rather more pleasant, in fact, since he is allowed to unbend for a little disgruntled comedy in the face of the immigration problem and its relations by romance.

Acting honors go to the always excellent Robert Barrat as a Jamaican steel worker with a passion curiously enough, for Dickens. He to his wife in the Mississippi delta. Worth a word of note, too, are Phillips Holmes, Glenda Farrell and Walter Woods and Warren Hymer.

* * *

The picture show is an elaborate affair. George Olsen, Dancing Honeymoon, with its composer, Neville Fleeson, on hand to contribute to the goings-on. Phil Baker's former stooge "Beetle" of radio and vaudeville fame, makes an independent debut, he'd sang by much of Mr. Baker's material. Other featured members of the revue are Frank Libuse, the Happy Sisters Francesca Malloy and the Danny Dare dancing boys.

Tomlin Tunes

Pinky Tomlin, new song-writing favorite of the screen, has written several numbers for "King Solomon of Broadway," one of the six forthcoming musical films from the Universal studios.

Tomlin, the author of "The Object of My Affection" and "What's the Reason," will sing in the new film with Dorothy Page, radio star. She is making her film debut in "Manhattan Moon," just released.

Webb Signs Up

Clifton Webb, famous dancing star of the stage, will appear with Joan Crawford in the forthcoming M-G-M production, "Evidence," an original screen story by Edward Knopf.

Webb has signed a long-term contract with the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios.

Queen of Kor Stars in "She"

HELEN GAHAGAN RANDOLPH SCOTT

Helen Gahagan and Randolph Scott, who will appear in "She," the screen version of H. Rider Haggard's famous novel of the same name. Miss Gahagan, a celebrated star in the legitimate theater, makes her screen debut in the role of queen of the mythical kingdom of Kor. The new film comes to the Keith Memorial July 4.

Water Film Pleases

Br'er Octopus, Br'er Shark, and Br'er Moray are only a few of the deep-sea monsters which Captain John D. Craig has chosen for his playmates in "Sea Killers," novel new under-water film at the Scollay Square Theater this week.

Dolores Del Rio

Captain Craig himself is on hand to deliver a pre-movie talk with each screening, recounting a few anecdotes of some of the dangers he encountered as cameraman and diver in various parts of the world.

The film itself is simply and naturally made, with little straining for dramatic effect. The marauders of the ferocious man-eating sea life pursue the sharks ever on the watch and ever dangerous; and the impassive cable octopus, one of which killed a diver in the Craig party, are all depicted in their deep-sea haunts.

Some of the film was taken while the diving party were working on a sunken ship in quest for its cargo of gold bullion.

The picture is not expensively made action is not always clear, but this is a further testament to the films' authenticity as a glimpse under water history made from day to day by the daring group of men.

The film was made in Pacific waters, off the western coast of Mexico and Southern California.

* * *

The co-feature at the Scollay this week is "In Caliente," with Pat O'Brien and Dolores Del Rio as its stars. A gay plot, dance creations from Busby Berkeley, and lavish Mexican settings make this good screen fare.

Uptown Offering

The new bill at the Uptown today offers "Let 'Em Have It," thrilling film account of the war on gangdom by Federal men. The cast includes Richard Arlen, Bruce Cabot, Virginia Bruce and Allen Brady as its featured players.

The co-feature is "People Will Talk," comedy with Charles Ruggles and Mary Boland.

Modern Bill

The Modern Theater offers as its new bill "The Hoosier Schoolmaster" with Norman Foster and Charlotte Henry, and "In Caliente," musical film with Dolores Del Rio and Pat O'Brien.

"The Hoosier Schoolmaster" is a first-run film adapted for the screen from Edward Eggleston's famous novel.

Powell Signed to Star in 'Two O'Clock Courage'

Los Angeles, June 29—Takes a lot of money for William Powell to keep up that mansion he built in Beverly Hills, but Bill makes a lot of money because at the moment he probably is as much in demand as any actor in the movies.

RKO now is doing a little boasting because they have persuaded him to star in another picture, "Two O'Clock Courage," a mystery-thriller with a Scotland Yard angle, to go on the floor on the order of "Star of Midnight."

As soon as I heard that "Two O'Clock Courage" based on Gerald Beaumont's novel was to be brought to the screen, the wheels in my brain, which has been running on only one cylinder, started working and I realized that this is the reason that Gelett is headed for Hollywood.

A letter from him from France says that he wants to come to Hollywood and find out what it's all about. Well, he will find plenty of company here now.

* * *

Rex, the wild horse, is coming back into pictures for Universal. And that reminds me that Elinor Glyn said that Rex had "it" and much more than any star in the movies. I suppose that is beside the point, but it's interesting to know that Rex and his colt will be starred in "Strongheart," an original story by Carey Wilson and, of course, it isn't a Western.

It's a tale of wild horses and will be made in Arizona. Noah Beery, Jr., just back from England; Jean Rogers, beauty contest winner; J. Farrell MacDonald and Raymond Hatton, with Louis Friedander directing, are all a part of this horse opera, and horse opera is what I mean.

* * *

Diana Bourbon, whose chief job in life is radio, is doing a bit of authoring on the side. Diana's picture, "Atlantic Adventure," is now in production at Columbia Studios and it stars lovely Nancy Carroll, who is back from New York, and who, by the way, is seen more and more with Van Smith. As soon as this is finished, "Homing Lady," another Bourbon story, will be put into production.

The search for just the right girl to play the lead in "Rich Man's Daughter" with Georges Raft has finally focussed on Joan Bennett, who was signed by B. P. Schulberg for the Sonia Sandblade-cursed role. Joan is under contract to Walter Wanger, an, of course, the picture she is making at Columbia is on a loan. It pays to do a good job for Jock Whitney, because he is one producer who doesn't forget. Ha liked Irving Pichel's direction as well of "She" that he has placed him under contract to direct three Technicolor Pictures the coming year C. B. DeMille would like to borrow James Cagney for "Samson and Delilah." Shades of Carmel!

Snapshots of Hollywood

DOROTHY LEE now smiling at NICK FORAN; they were stepping out a night or two; CHARLES FARRELL getting the fenders on his foreign roadster completely smashed while trying to pass a determined lady driver.

DOUGLAS MACLEAN and LORRAINE EDDY, his wife, who decided to travel alone a few months ago, surprising everyone by appearing together at the "Accent on Youth" preview. That's all today.

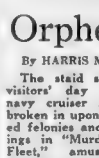
Mystery Film at Orpheum

By HARRIS MORGAN

The staid serenity of visitors' day aboard a navy cruiser is harshly broken in upon by assorted felonies and dirty doings in "Murder in the Fleet," amusing new comedy-mystery at the Loew's Orpheum this week.

* * *

Robert Taylor, a young gunnery officer, has been yearning to get ashore, as much to escape the visiting yokels as to see his intended, Jean Parker, we think. But orders come to stay on board and aid with the installation of new ordinance equipment of a secret nature.



Jean Parker

First the civilian engineer is murdered, then a woman electrician, befors the young lieutenant properly comes to grips with the killer.

And when he does, it speaks well for the aplomb of naval men. For he is confronted with a crazed man about to apply his cigar lighter to the ship's munitions store. The navy triumphs, though there are some ticklish moments, what with burning ignition charges and the consequent flooding of the chamber with the lieutenant and his crazy chum still in it.

* * *

"Murder in the Fleet" has thrills. Not very sophisticated ones, surely, but that is a small point. And the chances are that you will not guess the killer, for red herrings are drawn across the trail in the shapes of an officer who here noticeably and of a mysterious Oriental bureaucrat, who is quite the most evil looking individual who ever smoked a cigarette through a long holder.

Comedy has not been neglected; and it is good comedy. Ted Healy, as a civilian roustabout, and Nat Pendleton, as chief petty officer of the cruiser, wage a neat little war of their own for Una Merkel. They are all good.

* * *

A diverting vaudeville bill this week is headed by Jerry Mann in some good impersonations. Other good acts are the Danny Jones Dancing Revue, Lewis and Moore, and a clever tumbling team.

* * *

An added attraction at the Orpheum is the showing of the Louis-Carmera fight pictures. Every moment of the entire six rounds is screened, with the addition of the preliminary ceremonies in which former champions are introduced from the ring.

N. E. SILK MILLS Fight TO STAY IN Business

By Hugh E. Bradshaw

With a decaying cotton textile industry as a horrible example New England silk mills are seeking a way out of their present dilemma lest they too find themselves in the same condition.

Albert J. Lamarre, Rhode Island commissioner of public works is organizing a committee to act immediately to save the industry. The only solution to silk mill troubles is standardization of wages. At present New England mills can not compete for business with other sections because, of the difference in costs. Wages must be standardized to permit New England mills to remain in the picture, if not the south will take this industry too, in the opinion of Mr. Lamarre.

Dr O M. W Sprague again proved himself an independent thinker when, on his return from Europe, he said that big business is more responsible for the present state of affairs than anything done in Washington. Even the average business school professor has the knack of hitting hard when he believes that some particular branch of economic society is at fault. In this instance he thinks business price fixing has brought activity in some directions to a standstill. And without apologies names the United States Steel company as a retarding factor. In fact Dr. Sprague sees the big concern as the barrier to lower depreciation costs and makes no bones about saying so.

In the last week there has been little change in the market. And for the last month the condition of the average stock hardly has altered. To some observers this means that the market is in a state of solidation area and is digesting the previous rise. To others it means that distribution is in full swing. To these latter selling is an almost casual affair but nonetheless important. Caution and lack of strength from here on. If the market bursts into new high ground new commitments may be made easily enough. The price paid for protection in such an event is the difference between present prices and new highs.

Republic to Retire Bonds

Proceeds realized by Republic Steel from the sale of 20,000 shares Inland Steel common may be used to retire two small bond maturities totaling $2,510,500 later this year, it was reported.

News of the stock sale was exclusively reported by the New York American yesterday.

The two issues facing payment are Trumbull Steel ten-year 7 per cent debentures due Aug. 1, amounting to $1,891,500, and $619,000 Donner Steel first and purchase money mortgage 6 per cent 20-year gold bonds, due December 1. Both issues were assumed by Republic through merger.

REORGANIZATION

Plan of C. & N. W.

Petition has been filed in federal court by Chicago & North Western Railway Co. stating it desires to effect a plan of reorganization pursuant to section 77 of the National Bankruptcy Act.

North Western stated it was without funds to pay interest of $1,717,856 due June 29 on its 4½ per cent convertible debentures and that has no means of borrowing such interest.

Eastern Gas Pays

Eastern Gas & Fuel Associates declared quarterly dividends of $1.12½ on the 84½ preferred stock, and $1.50 on the $6 preferred, both payable October 1 to stock of record September 14.

WOOLEN Goods Prices STEADY

STRIKES ARE BIG FACTOR

New York, June 29—Wool goods markets have been considerably disturbed during the past week by threats of strikes and walkouts in the manufacturing district between Providence and Woonsocket, in Rhode Island, where many large producers of piece goods and yarns are located, according to the New York Wool Top Exchange Service.

The strikers succeeded in closing down seven plants throwing 3400 operators out of work, it is stated. Although the strikes are not expected to spread, they have brought an element of uncertainty into the goods market and have been a factor in holding prices down.

"At the same time, the decision of the Civilian Conservation Corps to postpone for a month or two heavy purchases of wool for blankets, pending new legislation regulating federal contracts, came as a disappointment to a large section of the trade," says the Exchange Service.

"A number of mills are depending on these orders to carry them over the slack period in late August and early September. It is generally believed, however, that contracts will be awarded before August 1 in order to give mills and clothing manufacturers enough time to outfit the army and the conservation corps for the winter.

"Because of the rush to complete deliveries of fall goods, mills are reported to be delaying opening spring lines until later than usual. Ordinarily, tropical worsteds are opened at this time, but it appears that few lines will be ready for showing before July 15.

"Mills are just beginning to book women's wear order for fall. Sales of dress goods and clothings are improving steadily, and a number of mills have acquired a substantial backlog.

"New business in men's wear fabrics, however, is slow. Clothing continues to move in good volume at wholesale, but retail sales are small, as is usual at this time of year.

"The industry at the present time is operating on an average of 30 hours a week. Production is estimated in some quarters at about 3,000,000 yards of men's wear fabrics now

Mother Trembles for Baby's Safety as a Bloody Carnival Rages About Her Home

By FLOYD GIBBONS

FLOYD GIBBONS

HELLO, EVERYBODY—

I've got a yarn here today, boys and girls, that is the story of many another woman member of the Adventurers' Club—the old, old story of a wife who followed her adventurous husband to the far corners of the earth.

You know, it is always the woman who is the real hero of such a partnership—always the woman who suffers most from the privations of life on the far-flung frontiers of civilization.

And so I am making out today's ten-smacker check in the name of MRS. LISSA EVANE of 467 Broadway, Newark, New Jersey, and hoping that it will go a little way toward compensating for the hardships in her life, and particularly for the hours of terror Lissa lived through on a certain eventful night nine years ago, in a far country and a strange, exotic clime.

Lissa's husband was working on a fruit plantation, far in the interior of Honduras. No white woman could follow him into those malarial stretches of Central American jungle, but Lissa went as far as Ceiba, a primitive little Honduran coast town, and there she stayed with her five-year-old son, waiting for those infrequent periods when her husband could come down out of the interior for a short visit.

The town of Ceiba wasn't much safer, or much more comfortable than the jungle. Lissa and her little boy lived in a house built on tall poles, with no one for company or protection but a native woman who kept house for her. They lived in continual fear of the short lived but tempestuous revolutions that broke out sporadically in that tiny tropic empire.

Bullets from the latest one, only a year before, were still in the walls and woodwork of Lissa's home—a constant reminder of what might—what inevitably would—happen again before many days went by.

One night Lissa awoke suddenly with the sound of a shot ringing in her ears. It sounded as though it had come from right under her bedroom window. In a fraction of a second she was wide awake, the thought of a brutal tropical revolution dinning in her brain.

Several shots followed the first, and her heart sank as she thought of the bullets imbedded in the woodwork, and of the numerous little holes where shots had come tearing through the thin plaster walls.

Now came a fusillade of shots—guns going off so fast that Lissa couldn't count them. She leaped from her bed, ran to her little boy's room and seized him in her arms. Then she dropped to the floor, covering her son's body with her own, as she had countless times been told to do whenever shooting occurred.

The shooting went on steadily outside, interspersed with yelling and cursing—with cries and moans of the victims and exultant howls of the killers. The cries seemed to come from all around the house—and from underneath it, where the tall poles raised its floor several feet above the ground.

How long Lissa lay there, her little son's body sheltered beneath her own, she never knew. It might have been only ten minutes, but to Lissa it seemed like hours. Every moment was one of fear and tension—fear that a bullet might tear its way through the flimsy walls and imbed itself in her body—fear lest the blood-crazed natives outside break into the house and start butchering its inmates.

Lissa felt terribly alone in those moments, a hundred miles away from her husband—a thousand from her native land, her family and her friends. She thought of her mother, and felt something tighten in her throat. Would she ever see her again? Would her husband come down from the hills to find his wife and baby dead—their home in ruins? "Funny," says Lissa, "how your mind races on when you think you're only going to live for a few more minutes."

There came a sudden lull in the fighting. The shooting seemed to move away up the beach, in the direction of the swamps. Lissa got up from the floor and put her baby back in his bed. Then, hearing some low sounds outside, she tip-toed to the window and peered out through the shutters. The sight she saw there was so inhuman and horrible that it lives as vividly in her memory today as the moment she looked out on it.

Outside, a tropic half-moon shining down on them, were several bodies, lying still and quiet on the ground. Two soldiers, standing guard over them, were conversing in low, gutteral tones. Suddenly one of the still forms moved a little—raised itself on one elbow. It was one of the soldiers who was over him, plunging his bayonet again and again into the stricken man's chest, cursing fiercely in Spanish as he did so.

The dying man's moan reached Lissa's ears as she turned, faint with horror, from the window. She threw herself face down on the bed and gave way to hysteria—sobbing her heart out to the quiet night.

The next day she learned the cause of the shooting. It had not been a revolution, after all, but a prison break. A number of prisoners had escaped from the fort, a short distance up the coast, and what Lissa had heard were the soldiers, hunting them down as they sought refuge under the houses along the beach. All but seven were killed. The seven were captured and shot against a wall the following morning. "That," says Lissa Evane, "is justice in Honduras."

Monday, I've a strange thriller from Thomas McGrath of 11 Lawrence street, Boston. It's entitled, "Sees Comrade Slain," and is a tale of the British troops in India.

It's as easy as just reaching for it—and a heck of a lot more fun. That's what hundreds of Boston American readers say of the $10 and $100 bills they have received from headline-hunter Floyd Gibbons for their TRUE adventure stories. Floyd says everybody has had at least one thrilling experience, and he wants to write up yours. Send him the facts, and win a pocketful to dough, like Mrs. Henry W. Gould of Worcester, who drew a $10 check and a $100 prize.

NEW CLASSIC AIR CONCERTS START

By N. F. T.

First of a series of two hour musical concerts by the New York Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra will be wafted over these Down East thickets by radio (WNAC) tonight between 8:30 and 10:30 o'clock.

"N. F. T."

Jose Iturbi, distinguished pianist - composer and conductor will wield the baton for the opening presentation and likewise for the coming four Saturday evenings. All of these are to originate in the huge Lewisohn Stadium, adjoining the College of the City of New York.

Wagner, Mozart and Brahms are the old masters to be interpreted by the orchestra this evening.

POPULAR PIECES

Four new songs—"And Then Some," "Paris in Spring," "Living in a Great Big Way," and "Kiss Me Goodnight"—will be in the list of the current week's 15 outstanding songs, recording to present voting indications, when Lennie Hayton and his orchestra present the weekly "Hit Parade" Program (WEEI) tonight at 8 o'clock.

Mimi and Genev Gald, talented juveniles of Somerville, who have appeared on the X-9 Club broadcasts, will guest star with Uncle Bob (E. Young) on his 147th broadcast of the Sunday Advertiser comics over WNAC at 10:15 tomorrow morning. Louis Cheney, well known pianist of Malden, will serve as accompanist.

Maxie Rosenbloom, former light heavyweight boxing champion; Sylvia Froos, petite singing star of the screen and air, and Reis and Dunn, well known vaudeville singing comedians, will join Otto Kruger and Martha Sleeper as guests of Al Jolson during his "Chatean" broadcast from Hollywood (WEEI) this evening at 9:30.
